FRIGHT FATAL TO WOMAN AS AUTO CRASHES

Invalid Wife of Capital Attorney Is Victim of Skidding Mishap.

SEVERAL ARE HURT IN SNOW ACCIDENTS

Four Persons Standing in Safety Zone Hit by Driver, Who Escapes.

A woman died of fright and a number of persons were injured in accidents caused by snow-covered streets and roads yesterday afternoon and last night. Only one-half inch of snow fell, the Weather Bureau reported.

Mrs. Clinton R. Colvin, the invalid wife of a Washington attorney, died from fright yesterday when her husband's automobile skidded into a telegraph pole at Buckland Springs, just north of Warrenton, Va. She was 59 years old.

Mrs. Colvin was riding with her husband and a group of relatives. At first, it appeared that Mrs. Colvin had been injured. A passing automobile took Mrs. Colvin and her sister, Mrs. John G. Nash, to the Alexandria General Hospital, where she was pronounced dead. Shock was given as the cause. None of the other passengers was injured.

Death Blamed on Shock.

Doctors at the hospital said that Mrs. Colvin had probably died from shock when the automobile struck the pole. She had been carried more than 50 miles to the hospital.

Mrs. Colvin made her home at 1238 Fairmont street northwest. In addition to her husband she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Robert M. Tolson, of this city; two brothers, David Barron, of Silver Spring, Md.; Herbert W. Barron, of Washington; and two sisters, Mrs. Nash and Mrs. Eugene Hart, of Alexandria.

Four persons standing in a safety zone in Connecticut avenue near Van Ness street northwest about 8 o'clock last night were victims of a hit-and-run driver. Three of the injured were taken to Garfield Hospital, but police had not been able to locate the fourth at a late hour last night.

Brothers Seriously Hurt.

Two brothers were the most seriously injured, Frank O. Rohland, 15 years old, who received a fracture of the left leg, and a broken right wrist, and Henry O. Rohland, 10 years old, who was reported to be suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and a possible fracture of the left leg. The condition of the younger was said to be undetermined. Their address is 2958 Tilden street northwest.

The third person is Ellen S. Roden, 52 years old, 1316 New Hampshire avenue northwest. She was suffering from bruises of the face, left leg and elbow. Her condition was not considered serious. All three of the injured were removed to the hospital by motorists who were halted by the accident.

A meager description of the accident was given Fourteenth Precinct police by a boy who was walking on the east side of Connecticut avenue at the time. He was not able to describe the car beyond the fact that it was a closed machine. It drove on, the boy told police, without stopping.

Rock Creek Road Closed.

Three automobiles skidded from the Tilden street hill leading into Rock Creek Park, one breaking a telephone pole at the base. Following discovery of these accidents by Fourteenth Precinct police, the street—from Connecticut avenue to Pierce Mill—was blocked off from traffic. None of the occupants of the cars is believed injured as no record of accidents of

Bullet Halts Man Sought in Assault

Baltimore Detectives Join State and County Police in Hunt.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 28.—Christopher Columbus Campbell, 27, wanted in Howard County for several years on charges ranging from assault with intent to kill to chicken theft, was captured last night in the mountains, after he had been wounded. He was caught by Baltimore detectives, members of the State constabulary and Frederick County officers. Campbell is in the Washington County Hospital under heavy guard. He will be taken to Ellicott City as soon as he recovers sufficiently to be moved.

Lee Mayne was arrested with him and taken to Frederick and lodged in jail.

Campbell had been making his rendezvous with relatives in the mountains for some time, the authorities learned. They waited outside the home where he had been staying until Campbell and Mayne arrived in a car. Mayne surrendered when ordered, but Campbell ran until a bullet halted him.

Turkey Plans Drastic Steps to Crush Revolt

KEMAL PASHA.

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Reestablishment of Turkish Chekas, called tribunals of independence, which in 1925 rounded up the Sheik Said rebels, is a probability that again darkens the horizon of the Turkish republic.

According to Angora officials, the recent religious revolt at Menemen necessitates the government's wiping out all adherents of the old Islamic regime, who officials admit, number hundreds of thousands.

About 500 persons have been arrested throughout Turkey, including many priests, dervishes, sheiks and some officials of Fethi Bey's defunct liberal party since a group of dervishes last Wednesday incited the population of Menemen into a sanguinary manifestation in favor of restoration of the caliphate. Government officials predict the punishment to be meted out will forever crush any possibility of religious reaction in Turkey.

Six military and civil officials of the Turkish government were arrested at Menemen today charged with participation in religious reaction. It was announced other officials at Manissa also will be arrested.

Twenty-six persons were arrested in Istanbul and all travelers arriving here from Smyrna are being subjected to police interrogation. Prime Minister Ismet Pasha having consulted here with President Kemal Pasha, has left for Angora to present to Parliament a law empowering the government to exert drastic repression of reactionaries.

CAPITOL IS BURNED AT BISMARCK, N. D.

Virtually All State Records Consumed as Flames Devour Building.

AFFAIRS ARE TANGLED

Bismarck, N. D., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The North Dakota Capitol was destroyed by fire today.

Virtually all of the official records, files and historical documents of the State were consumed by the flames, which started on the upper floor of the four-story brick building, spread rapidly, and destroyed the main structure and both wings.

State affairs were thrown into turmoil and Gov. George F. Shafer issued a call for an immediate meeting of all State officials to consider the situation.

The capitol was erected in 1884 when North and South Dakota were one unit of government under the title of "Dakota Territory." The two wings were added in 1894 and 1904.

Although the monetary loss is not expected to exceed $800,000, the damage caused to the records was described as incalculable.

Loss of the records will result in the greatest confusion in the State's

Coolidge Gives $100 To Cobbler Friend

Lucey, Long His Counselor, Gets Five $20 Gold Pieces for Christmas.

Northampton, Mass., Dec. 28 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—James D. Lucey, Northampton philosopher-cobbler and Calvin Coolidge's old friend, is $100 richer today because of a Christmas gift from the former President. For many years it has been the custom of Mr. Coolidge to send Mr. Lucey a box of cigars, but this year's gift was somewhat of a departure.

The gift was a small ornate cedar chest, in which reposed five new $20 gold pieces.

Mr. Lucey has repaired Coolidge's shoes ever since that notable was a young lawyer, and his counsel has found eager reception in the Coolidge ear.

NONUNIONIST HOME BOMBED IN DANVILLE

Hole Torn in Back Yard, but House Occupants Are Uninjured.

PLANTS REOPEN TODAY

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Dec. 28.—A heavy explosion at Schoolfield at 7 o'clock this evening was traced to Madison avenue where, in the rear of a home owned by Arthur Acarce, but occupied by Mrs. Annie Stuart, a hole was blown in the ground. The shock was felt throughout Schoolfield and part of Danville, but no damage was done to the house.

People in the neighborhood were greatly frightened and shocked by the concussion. Nonunion workers dwelt in the house. The police had no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage. It was the first dynamiting in ten days and came on the eve of the reopening of the mills.

Danville, Va., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The Danville textile strike, now three months old, will swing into a new week of activity tomorrow with striking union employes and the management of the Riverside and Dan River Mills apparently as far from settlement of the differences as when the walkout was called September 29.

Opening of the mills tomorrow after the Christmas shutdown inaugurates a week which union leaders said tonight they viewed as highly important. C. W. Bolick, strike manager, said increasing encouragement is being received by the strikers from the American labor movement in their fight, which has been termed the "spearhead" of labor's effort to unionize the South.

An announcement of great importance to strikers to be made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was pointed to union officials as a development to give significance to the week. Green is expected here Tuesday to address an open meeting of the union that evening. No details of his announcement have been divulged.

The first evictions, planned by the mill management against a number of strikers' families will become ef-

JOFFRE LAPSES INTO COMA; END OF FIGHT NEARS

PATIENT REPORTED SLOWLY WEAKENING

Paris, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Marshal Joffre, hero of the first Battle of the Marne, tonight was fighting a losing battle against death.

The 78-year-old gallant soldier lapsed into a coma this evening, said a member of his staff, who declared all hope of recovery had virtually been abandoned.

At 7:30 p. m., Drs. Leriche and Boulin said his condition remained "stationary," but an official communique a few hours earlier said the patient was slowly weakening. In their usual guarded manner they admitted a slight improvement that had set in this morning had not been maintained.

The morning bulletin had caused hope to be revived among prominent Frenchmen and members of the diplomatic service who called at the Hospital St. Jean-de-Dieu. But as the day wore on and the more alarming bulletins were issued in the afternoon, late visitors emerged from the clinic with sad faces from which all hope had fled.

Recognized Old Friends.

Gen. Weygand and Alexander Millerand, former President of France, and Mme. Millerand were admitted to the bedside this morning and said on leaving that Marshal Joffre had recognized them. Other morning callers who, however, were not admitted to the bedside were Mme. Poincare, who called in the name of her husband, who likewise is ill; Gen. Goursud and Deputy Mansuit, who carried greetings from the town of Rivesaltes, Joffre's birthplace, near Perpignan.

Col. Jean Fabry, who was Joffre's aide de camp for the first three years of the war and accompanied the marshal on his visit to the United States in 1917, spoke with him for a few moments during the morning.

"His alert mind is still functioning admirably," he said. "His keen blue eyes, with an expression of such intelligent kindness that all those who approach him could never forget, still radiate good will and cheer."

Daughter Departs Fearfully.

The marshal's wife and daughter stayed at the bedside until 4 p. m., when Mme Lafilet was asked by the doctors to leave her mother alone with the patient. On emerging Mme. Lafilet was in tears and said, "We fear another crisis, which may be fatal."

From that hour until dark there was a continual stream of eminent callers. Among them were Premier Theodore Steeg, Minister of the Interior Leygues and Gens. Guillaumat, Debeney and Nollet, former Queen Amelie of Portugal, Norman Armour, American Charge d'Affaires; Phillippe Roy, Canadian Minister, and Mme. La Marechale Foch. None was admitted to the bedside, however, as strict orders from the physicians were that the wife alone was to be admitted to the sickroom.

As the evening hours wore on large crowds gathered in the Rue Oudinot, silent and respectful and with anguish visible on all faces. They spoke in low tones and many of them offered prayers for the great soldier.

Has Lucid Intervals.

Later the marshal's daughter returned to the sick room, and when she emerged shortly after 9 o'clock

40 HOUSE DRYS HELD READY TO DESERT CAUSE

Editor of Church Paper Forecasts Gains for Wet Forces.

ENFORCEMENT FUND BATTLE IS FORESEEN

New Attack Launched Upon Clark Decision; Report on Law Again Delayed.

(Associated Press.)

The opinion advanced yesterday that 40 dry members of the House are waiting a strategic moment to switch their allegiance to the wets, followed closely reports that a battle is brewing in that chamber over the proposed $2,000,000 appropriation for 500 additional prohibition agents, requested by the Justice Department.

Simultaneously, members of the Law Enforcement Commission, returning from a five-day recess, indicated that another delay is in prospect in connection with their promised prohibition report, while from other quarters came a flurry of statements on the wet and dry question.

From Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald, came a statement that a recent "authoritative canvass of the Capitol lobbies" had "revealed at least 40 members of the House who confessed themselves prepared to desert."

Scores "Professional" Drys.

At the same time, High strongly criticized the "professional" dry leaders. He asserted that "the Nation's dry organizations are not adequate, as they stand today, to save prohibition."

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, meanwhile, made another attack upon the decision of Judge Clark, of New Jersey, holding the eighteenth amendment invalid.

It issued a statement from Senator Sheppard, of Texas, coauthor of the amendment, saying that at the time Congress considered it only one voice was raised, and that weakly, against the proposal to have the amendment ratified by State legislatures.

Judge Clark held ratification should have been given by constitutional conventions.

Criticizes Jail Claim.

A third statement came from Ernest Cherrington, secretary of the world league against alcoholism, criticizing the recent claim by the association against the prohibition amendment that 50,000 prohibition prisoners are now held in American jails.

Cherrington said "the wets are crying out today" because "the shoe is pinching them."

Word of a prospective House battle over the increased dry appropriation came from antiprohibition members of the appropriations subcommittee, handing the measure. It was reported the proposed increase had been approved only after being once rejected, and that some members of the group will carry their objecttions to the House floor.

Predict Strong Criticism.

The appropriation must still be approved by the full appropriations committee before being reported to the House.

Its members declined to be quoted today, but the prediction was made that "there will be plenty of criticism of that appropriation, when and if it is reported."

One member said the testimony of Prohibition Director Woodcock, in justification of the $2,000,000, will make "very interesting reading."

Several members of the Law Enforcement Commission believed it

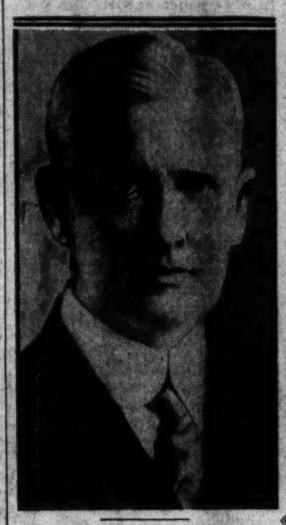
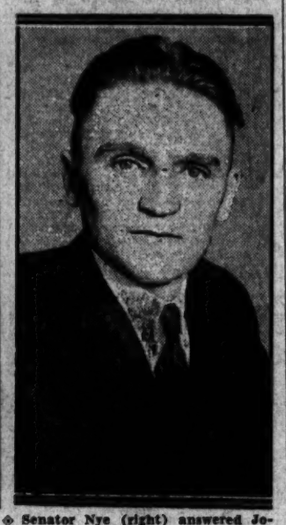
TALK OF THIRD PARTY BELITTLED BY BORAH; SEES NEW ALIGNMENT

Nye Says Testimony Indicated Slush Fund





Senator Nye (right) answered Joseph R. Nutt's apology demand by saying that perhaps the disputed $40,000 was not a slush fund, but that testimony showed it secured funds used for "shameful purposes."

Replies to Demands for Apology to Treasurer With Brevity.

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Senator Gerald Nye, North Dakota, today issued what he termed his "response" to demands of Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee, for a public apology for remarks attributed to Nye in regard to an alleged campaign "slush fund."

The statement was given out on his arrival here this morning and said:

"It is barely possible that further investigation may reveal that the

WOOD RENEWS FIGHT TO DEPOSE NORRIS

Nebraskan Denies Promise to Support Roosevelt in 1932 Campaign.

(Associated Press.)

Talk of a third party was belittled yesterday by Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the Senate independents, but he spoke significantly of realignments, particularly in legislative matters.

Senator Borah said he saw no possibility of a single new party or group of leaders satisfying the constituency of such issues as power, prohibition and farm relief.

"I do not see any new party," he commented as the Republican storm over the right of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, to the party's label continued, "but I do see some realignments which will be evidenced more in legislative matters than in open announcements upon the part of either leaders or constituents. That has already taken place to a marked degree."

Leaders Look to 1932.

The Idahoan's pronouncement and a fresh notice yesterday by Senator Norris that he was not getting out of the party nor organizing a new one caused Republican leaders to look ahead to the 1932 national convention.

Representative Wood, of Indiana, yesterday revived the attempt of some Republican regulars to uncloak Norris of the party's mantle. In a statement issued through the Republican national committee he asserted the Nebraskan has promised support for the Democrats in 1932 if they nominate a "Progressive."

Senator Norris replied he had not promised to support Gov. Roosevelt of New York should he be nominated by the Democrats in 1932 for the Presidency, and he reasserted his own Republicanism.

Comment of Borah.

Senator Borah made the following comment on the current discussion over formation of a third party:

"My observation and my reading leads me to the opinion that new parties can not be successfully organized by a few men or by a few leaders, however able and sincere they may be. New patries have to come up from the grass roots. It takes some single dominating issue accompanied by a dramatic crisis to swing people from their old political moorings and place them in new positions.

"There are at least four or five vital issues before our people and a new party could not agree upon a platform on all of them any more than can the old parties. Take power, prohibition, farm relief and the duty of the State and the duty of the Nation with reference to at least two great problems. Who will write the platform that will weld together not a few leaders but weld together constituencies throughout the country?

Sees No New Party.

"I do not see any new party, but I do see some realignments which will be evidenced more in legislative matters than in open announcements upon the part of either leaders or constituents that has already taken place to a marked degree. There are two things about which I do not feel deeply moved—first, a few men reading somebody out of a party and secondly, a few men organizing a new party."

Meanwhile, the drive against Senator Norris initiated by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, and supported vigorously by Representative Wood, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, still seemed deadlocked last night.

Norris has refused to head a third party and has declined to get out of the Republican party. Other Senate independents likewise have given

STAMP FORECASTS WORLD'S RECOVERY

British Economist Asserts United States Will Lead Upward Trend.

DR. KLEIN'S ANALYSIS

New York, Dec. 28 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The United States will be the first country in the world to recover from the present world-wide depression, Sir Josiah Stamp, one of England's most eminent economists, predicted today in a radio address on the "Economic Outlook for 1931" broadcast from London over the Columbia network.

"Judging by the experience of past depressions," he said, "we can hardly expect the worst to be over until April or May next, and then a recovery will be halting and slow and not gain much momentum until the beginning of 1932.

"On the signs of the present, I think that substantial recovery will come from your side first. What we need, of course, is to keep our fundamental conditions rightly framed up so that recovery will find us ready for action as it gains momentum.

"First of all, we ought to maintain cheap money as long as possible, and not merely cheap money of a short character but also money lent for considerable periods. You are certainly doing your share of that in New York. I should encourage everywhere governmental economy and balanced budgets."

Sir Josiah, analyzing the causes of the present depression said, "There is very great reluctance to attribute

250 Hurt in Clash With Indian Police

Crowd Tries to Conduct Flag Ceremonial in Defiance of Ban.

Bombay, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—More than 250 persons were injured today when police dispersed crowds attempting to hold a ceremony of salute to the national flag in defiance of a ban. Eight policemen were injured with stones hurled by the crowds as the police made repeated charges with their bamboo staves.

The president and four members of the local congress war council were arrested.

Authorities said 50 persons were treated for minor injuries and 200 in congress hospitals. Of the latter, 150 were held for further treatment, 12 of them being seriously injured.

Reds Open Stores to Catch Rubles of Outcast Group

Soviet Will Compete With Rapidly Disappearing Private Trader for Money of Former Aristocracy and Clergy, Barred From Government Shops.

Moscow, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The Soviet government has gone into business in competition with the fast disappearing private trader in an effort to extract elusive rubles from the pockets of the outcast classes who are excluded from the cooperative stores.

Twenty-five "open shops" have been opened in Moscow by the commissariat of supply, where any one may buy anything available at any time—at a price. These shops are stocked with food and clothing and practically everything to be found in the cooperatives which kulaks (former landowners), clergymen and former aristocrats are prohibited from patronizing.

Here, however, are the prices: Butter, $5 a pound; rice, $1.25 a pound; Cheese, $6 a pound; smoked sausage, $6 a pound; potatoes, 25 cents a pound; a head of cabbage, $1; apples, $1 a pound; smoked fish, $5 a pound, and hams, $4.50 a pound.

At these prices it might seem customers would be few, but the largest shop today was crowded with eager purchasers, many of them even standing in line for various commodities. Where the money comes from is somewhat of a mystery, but there is a faint suspicion the outcast classes still have some funds and jewels concealed for a rainy day. Also many receive funds from friends and relatives abroad.

In addition to the Moscow shops, several have been opened in Leningrad. All are of an experimental nature, and if they prove successful, others probably will be opened in other cities. While the prices are high, they are lower than those asked by the private dealers, and expectations are they will force the private merchant to lower his prices or eventually quit business.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

It does not seem likely that any attempt made in the near future to start another political party could succeed. It is an enormous undertaking that requires the force of some great moral upheaval to make it effective. Without a political leader of nationwide influence no practical result would be secured.

So far as now appears any new party would have to be radical. Because the Democratic party has had the solid South without much regard to issues, it has usually tried to appeal to the radicals in the North. If it were to lose this strength it could not win. If there were no choice at the next presidential election the decision would go to the House of Representatives where, in 1932, the Republicans will control a majority of the States and so would elect a Republican President. A third party apparently would insure a Republican victory. For that reason any plan to start a new party will not seem practical. But in addition to this our people are not third-party minded. They believe all necessary reforms can be secured within the old parties and that they are the best instruments of government.

Woman's Written Plea Bans Rites, Flowers and Grief

Burial Today of Former Capital Woman Will Be Without Procession or Pallbearers, With Her Prepared Eulogy Only Spoken Word.

With her self-written eulogy the only formal word of farewell, Mrs. E. Virginia Smith, formerly of Washington, will be buried today at Winchester, Va. She died yesterday after a long illness.

The eulogy itself, a strange potpourri of cynicyam, philosophy and thoughtfulness for her survivors will be read at her request. There will be no services, no pallbearers, and no casket other than a cheap box—also at her request.

"Place my worn-out body in an inexpensive case," she directed in her eulogy. "Buried money never sprouts; therefore, do not bury what can benefit the living. Hold no services and sing no songs over my flesh and bones. Invite no pallbearers to carry my body; spare them such duty—it is the undertaker's work. Pluck no lovely buds to die for me. Let them live; they, too, have not long to stay.

"March no funeral procession behind by body, and wear no funeral expression at my bier. I pray you be of good cheer, and of death have no fear. At my request, then, fling such conventionalities to the wind. Let us hope the orthodox critics will be tolerant, but it is doubtful, for nothing is more firmly intrenched than intolerance.

"At my grave read the following words of mine: Human beings realize neither the depths of their cruelty nor the heights of their sublimity. They are ground between the millstones of coin and convention. Also, death is a great and merciful warden, who unbolts our prison notice they will vote with the Republicans again on organization and will retain their party label—whatever may be the effect eighteen months hence in the national convention.

President Hoover is still holding aloof from the Republican battle, and Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee, is awaiting an apology from Chairman Nye, of the Senate campaign funds committee for terming a $40,000 fund of the party in the last campaign a "slush fund."

Indorsement Starts Talk.

The indorsement given Saturday by Senator Norris to Gov. Roosevelt's attitude on the power issue provoked considerable discussion yesterday. Others of the Senate Republican independent wing hastened to state privately they were not indorsing Gov. Roosevelt as a Democratic nominee in 1932 against Herbert Hoover.

Representative Wood stated:

"Just what Senator Norris will do in 1932 if the Democrats fail to heed his warnings can only be left to conjecture, as he already has declined Dr. John Dewey's request to again transfer his political allegiance and become the presidential candidate of a third party."

Norris Denies Support.

Senator Norris said:

"Some newspaper articles published today based upon an interview which I had yesterday gave the impression that I intended to support Gov. Roosevelt for President in 1932. I regret this, for I made no such statement. I have said nothing upon which such a conclusion could be based.

"In the presence of a score of reputable Washington correspondents I expressed my admiration for Gov. Roosevelt as a man and expressed my general agreement with him on the power issue. I made that statement in response to the direct question of whether I should support Gov. Roosevelt if he were nominated for President on the Democratic ticket in 1932.

"I stated specifically that I had not made up my mind whom I would support for President in 1932; that the nomination had not been made; that I am a Republican and, I believe, a good Republican, and it is not part of my business to nominate a Democrat for the Presidency."

Wood Calls Norris Dictator.

Wood, after scanning the newspaper interviews, gave his statement asserting that Norris "now is assuming to be a dictator to the Democrat party."

"Although he campaigned for office only last month as a Republican and was elected as such," Wood said "he throws off the Republican mantle and proceeds to dictate to the Democratic party whom it shall and shall not nominate for the Presidency in 1932 if it expects to find him battling under its banner in the next campaign as it did in 1928. Does anybody need any better proof that he is not a Republican and obtained his reelection under false colors?

"The Democratic leaders are warned by this political chameleon that they must not nominate Owen D. Young, of New York, because there is a deep-laid and sinister plot of the 'power trust' to bring about Mr. Young's nomination," he added.

"On the other hand the Democratic leaders are promised that if they will nominate some 'progressive' who sees eye to eye with Senator Norris on great public questions they can count on him to beat the political tom-toms for them again."

Senate Should Ignore Lucas Row, Moses Says

Concord, N. H., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—George H. Moses, United States senator from New Hampshire, today expressed the opinion the Senate should take no part in the controversy between Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska, and Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee.

"This dispute, as I see it," Senator Moses said, "is not one of which the Senate, as the Senate, should take cognizance. The matter is one for the national committee to settle.

"My present opinion is that Senator Norris will not be read out of the Republican party, and that Mr. Lucas will not be deposed from his office in the national committee. In other words the status quo will be preserved."

APOLOGY DEMANDS ANSWERED BY NYE

$40,000 was not a slush fund. However, the committee already has as a part of its record testimony that the money was on deposit as security for other funds which were used for baseless and shameful purposes in connection with the fight centering around Senator Norris, of Nebraska."

Senator Nye was asked if he had any statement to make regarding Nutt's direct demand for a public apology.

"That is my apology," he responded.

Nutt's demand was made yesterday in a dictated statement to Republican national headquarters from his home in Ohio. The statement said $50,000 was placed in a local bank "merely for bookkeeping convenience," that $32,000 of it was expended exclusively in congressional campaigns, and a detailed report of the expenditures was on file in Washington when Nye called it a slush fund. He said none of it was used to oppose any senator.

Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank of Washington, testified before Nye's campaign fund committee Monday that Nutt opened a $40,000 account with the bank October 23 for the convenience of Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the national committee. It was to this sum Senator Nye referred today.

Senator Nye's statement as to the placing of money as security for funds in a campaign against Senator Norris referred to testimony that the special fund was pledged as security for a personal loan to Lucas, part of which went for literature to be used in the campaign against Senator Norris.

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Announcement of a contemplated Nation-wide motion picture theater chain capitalized at $5,000,000 was made today by Harold B. Franklin, former president of Fox West Coast Theaters.

He announced contracts had been signed between himself and Howard B. Hughes, independent movie producer, for organization of the Hughes-Franklin Theaters. The announcement said the financing had been completely arranged with no stock to be offered the public, and that going theaters would be acquired in "important communities throughout the country."

'MELLON GAG' HELD APPLIED TO LEGION

CONTEST AT CONVENTION

(Associated Press.)

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday successful application of the "gag rule" by "Mr. Mellon's cohorts" at the Boston American Legion convention was responsible for the failure of that group to act on proposals for cash conversion of veterans' compensation certificates.

Patman said the organization had not committed itself against conversion, adding that at the convention "misleading and false statements were circulated that the legion should not take action on my proposal, because it was strictly a partisan matter, and I was attempting to throw mud on the administration that passed the 'tombstone bonus bill.'"

"This was false," Patman said, "but Mr. Mellon's cohorts were successful in applying the gag rule to the extent that free discussion and a fair vote on the merits of the proposal were denied."

He quoted O. L. Bodenhamer, a former commander of the legion, as having said the Boston action "meant simply that they did not care, at that particular time, to discuss or pass judgment upon the matter."

The present commander, Ralph T. O'Neil, Patman said, had expressed the opinion the legion should not initiate such legislation, "but we most certainly will not oppose it."

28,104,000 Attend Schools of Nation

Annual Review of Federal Office of Education Made Public.

(Associated Press.)

Approximately 28,104,000 students—nearly one-fourth of the Nation's population—are in elementary and high schools.

This was announced yesterday in an annual review by the Federal office of education, which said 848,500 teachers were employed in 254,200 schoolhouses and that the total annual expenditure was $2,389,000,000.

Elementary schools had 21,370,000 pupils, 4,030,000 were in public high schools and 2,704,000 registered in private and parochial institutions.

The report said "the declining birth rate is being felt in the schools," and held there is an "apparent oversupply" of teachers in liberal arts and elementary courses.

The teacher surplus was credited with causing more exacting requirements for entrance to teacher-preparing institutions and for certification.

Burmese Raiders Stoutly Fortified

Troops Expected to Have Difficulty in Overthrowing Rebels.

Rangoon, Burma, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The government expedition of 1,000 trained troops against raiding Burmese rebels in the Tharawaddy district, is expected to be confronted with a difficult task, the natives having established themselves in strongly fortified positions.

Reports are that they have plenty of ammunition and guns and have taken up a position behind 5 miles of impenetrable jungle. They are said to have strengthened their position by erecting strong barriers of felled trees. A highly developed scout system has been organized to prevent surprise attacks.

The rebels, estimated at more than 1,000, have looted villages and have killed policemen.

LEGGE CHALLENGED TO AID BOARD QUIZ

Simpson Says He Feels Sure He Could Win in Name-Calling Contest.

REITERATES HIS CHARGE

Oklahoma City, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—John A. Simpson, National Farmers Union president, has challenged Alexander Legge, Farm Board chairman, to join in urging passage in the Senate of the Walsh resolution calling for investigation of the board's marketing activities.

In a letter to Legge made public here tonight, Simpson asserted that "shouting liar" did not clear the chairman of charges he sought to break the price of wheat and had testified he opposed an advance in the cotton price. Legge had said any one making the Simpson charges was an "unmitigated liar."

"Were I so inclined," Simpson said in his letter, "I feel sure that I could win over you in any name-calling contest. You, sir, may have acquired some slight experience in shouting and bellowing at underlings while you were head of the Harvester Trust, but I have driven mules and called hogs to the feed trough.

Challenges to Act.

"Your attempt to strut like a 2-cent Mussolini when you replied to my charges fails to intimidate me," Simpson continued. "I challenge you," said the letter, "if you feel innocent of the charges, to join with me in urging passage by the Senate of the Walsh resolution calling for an investigation of the marketing activities of the Farm Board.

"Shouting 'liar' does not clear you of those charges. A Senate investigation might—though I am convinced it would not.

"The charges that I made against you were two.

"First, I charged that you testified at a recent agriculture committee hearing that the Farm Board, through its marketing agencies, had bought and sold on the wheat exchange to the extent of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, and that on November 22 your set-ups also sold on the Chicago exchange three and one-half million bushels of wheat for the purpose of breaking the price.

Resume of Testimony.

"You testified that the Farm Board and its set-ups also bought and sold on the cotton exchange. You further testified before this committee that you wanted wheat to be kept so low that it could be fed to hogs instead of corn; you further testified that you did not want to see cotton advance in price; that the textile mills needed cotton at just about the price that it is now.

"Second, I charged that the Farm Board marketing agencies were using Federal money to force farm organizations to subscribe to and approve of Farm Board policies.

"These things, sir, I stand ready to prove to any responsible investigating body, as I have pointed out before."

Prince George Resting After Fall From Horse

Melton Mowbray, England, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The condition of Prince George, youngest son of King George and Queen Mary, was quite satisfactory today after his tess in the hunting field Saturday. It was stated the prince's shoulder had been badly wrenched and it would be same days before he could use his arm.

The prince had planned to proceed to the family palace at Sandringham today, but it was thought advisable he take another day's rest at Burrough Court, where he was conveyed after the accident.

PRESIDENT MARKS WILSON'S BIRTHDAY

MEETING NEXT SUNDAY

A wreath from the man himself, now President of the United States, who served under the war President during the troublous days of 1917-18, was laid on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson at Washington Cathedral yesterday morning. The wreath was borne to the Wilson tomb by Lieut. Col. Campbell B. Hodges, chief military aid to President Hoover.

Other wreaths were placed on the tomb by representatives of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, New York, and other organizations and by private individuals. This is an annual custom, no formal services being held in connection with the former President's birthday anniversary. Each Armistice Day commemorative services which attract Nation-wide attention are conducted at the tomb.

The Washington Post inadvertently reported in its Sunday edition that the Woodrow Wilson Foundation committee of Washington would hold a meeting in the National Theater on that day.

The meeting will be held in the National Theater Sunday, January 4, with John H. Clarke, former associate justice of the United States Supreme Court as the principal speaker. The Washington Post regrets its error and is glad to publish this correction.

It is expected that the meeting will be attended by Mrs. Wilson, members of the Cabinet, members of the Diplomatic Corps and of Congress. Dr. James Brown Scott, chairman of the foundation, will preside.

any responsibility to the maldistribution of gold" and then went on to express his own conviction that the present "very lopsided distribution of gold" is exercising an adverse influence on world economics.

(Associated Press.)

Reports of European animosity toward the United States because of its war debts, immigration and tariff policies—save for bitterness existing in one country—were "a figment of superheated imaginations," Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, declared yesterday.

Describing European depression, Dr. Klein asserted in a radio address over the Columbia Broadcasting System that America was in a far more favorable situation in virtually every point of comparison. Countries abroad, he added, now hold a deepening appreciation that in the economic stability of the United States "lies the greatest single hope for world recovery today."

"We were led to believe," he continued, "that around every foreign fireside the family gathered each evening and went into a five-minute huddle of good, snappy anti-Americanism.

"I'm going to answer that question a bit summarily. In Europe and the Near East the alleged foreign enmity toward this country and its business efforts is largely mythical right now—a figment of superheated imaginations. You can find some local irritation or envy in certain spots—but any general, organized animosity or malevolence toward American commerce or the American people is virtually nonexistent."

Dr. Klein has recently returned from an extended tour abroad. He did not name the country in which he said bitterness existed because of the new Smoot-Hawley tariff act, but said it was of minor importance economically.

"Europe is in a bad way," he continued. "There is no use trying to blink that fact. But let me add that there are also elements of hope—forces making gradually for betterment. Europe is engulfed (as we ourselves have been) in a depression that is universal.

"Unemployment in Europe will probably be at its peak toward the latter part of January and is expected to reach 7,500,000 or more. There is political unrest, seething to the surface in many places, in many varied forms. Actual hunger exists—and political upheavals are feeding on the empty stomaches of the land.

"Politics is often disorganized, is made futile and confused by the multitude of parties—resulting in governmental policies of the sheerest expediency, a resort to hopeless compromises, a lack of coordinated efforts and logical 'follow-ups.'"

Dr. Klein said the depression abroad had meant a loss to the United States in the gross value of its export trade, but that "so far as competitive ability and vigor are concerned, we are not slipping in the least." He added that inventories all over Europe are depleted and there was a desire to buy if possible.

Europe's Purchases Here Increase in Percentage

(Associated Press.)

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States said yesterday that despite the existence of "a period of international trade recession," Europe purchased a larger percentage of American exports during the first nine months of this year than in corresponding periods for the last three years.

Figures quoted in a statement by the organization said 46.3 per cent of all United States exports from January to September, inclusive, went to Europe, as compared with 42.7 per cent in 1929, 44.7 in 1928 and 45.9 in 1927.

"Gauged by dollar value," the statement added, "ten out of 79 of the buyers of our products throughout the world increased their purchases from us in the January-September period of 1930 over the same period of 1929."

Purchases of European Soviet Russia, which headed the list, were said to have increased 72 per cent.

STATE DOCUMENTS BURN AT BISMARCK

AFFAIRS IN CONFUSION

history and years will elapse before it is untangled, Gov. Shafer said.

The original copy of the State constitution was among the few papers saved. Secretary of State Robert Byrn brought it out of his office and was slightly burned and cut in his effort. He was the only casualty.

Among the papers lost are the records of about $55,000,000 worth of investments in the State land department and the records of $40,000,000 in the State treasurer's office. State highway department officials estimated that it will cost from $200,000 to $300,000 to replace their plans.

Origin of the fire was not determined.

Three hours after discovery of the flames, the four walls stood a virtually empty shell. The fire was discovered by Joseph Winkel, janitor and night watchman, at 7:35 a. m. He gave the alarm, but before firemen could arrive, the blaze had already eaten through the roof and covered the entire top floor.

State officials attempted to save records as the fire worked downward, but were able to salvage only a small amount from the lower floors.

The State Legislature, which convenes January 6, is left homeless, but plans are under way to have members meet on the regular date in the new county World War memorial and in the city auditorium. State officials are prepared to submit immediately an emergency bill for appropriations to construct a new building.

For many years governors have recommended a new capitol, but it was not until 1929 that the Legislature enacted a law to levy a one-twentieth-mill tax for the succeeding six years, the proceeds—estimated at $650,000—to go into the capitol fund, in which there is already $900,000, derived from land grants.

Gov. Shafer, who is preparing his inaugural message to the legislators, had inserted, a few days ago, a recommendation that a new capitol be constructed.

Records destroyed or damaged were said by State officials, after a hasty check, to include:

State land department—Records of $55,000,000 State investments.

State treasurer's office—Records of investments aggregating over $40,000,000.

State highway department—Profiles and plans for work which, it is estimated, will cost between $200,000 and $300,000 to duplicate.

State railroad board — Records which cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to complete.

State auditor's office—Records and documents of value undetermined, but "worth a great deal," according to State Auditor John Steen.

Board of administration—Records and accounts of all State institutions which, officials said, can not be replaced.

Governor's office—Loss of all files and records.

State hail bonding and tornado insurance department — Records of millions of dollars of expenditures and collections.

State tax commissioner's office—Records and data destroyed.

State engineer's office—Data which required years of work and nearly $100,000 to accumulate.

State department of agriculture and labor—Records of many years, including those of the dairy department.

State industrial commission—Records destroyed.

PLAN TO BOOST RAIL REVENUE IS FEATURE

U. S. COMPETITION IS HIT

(Associated Press.)

An agreement unanimously adopted by the Nation's railroads, asking a respite from rate reductions and withdrawal of Government competition was named yesterday by R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway Association, as the outstanding development in the railroad field during 1930.

The policy was adopted, Aishton said, to stem a marked shrinkage in the growth of traffic since 1920, due, in part, to the use of automobiles, trucks and buses, traffic through the Panama Canal and over inland waterways.

He described the policy as asking "a fairly comparable system of regulation for competing transportation service," withdrawal of governmental competition through direct operation of transportation facilities as well as indirectly through subsidies; a respite from rate reductions and suspensions by regulatory bodies and adverse legislation.

In reviewing the railroad field for the year, Aishton said two records were established, one an average speed for freight trains of 13.7 miles per hour, and another for fuel economy, an average of 120 pounds of fuel being used to haul 1,000 tons of freight a mile.

The loading of revenue freight for the year was estimated at 45,851,000 cars, a reduction of nearly 7,000,000 under 1929.

Capital expenditures were estimated at $675,000,000, an increase of $21,000,000 over 1929, and $198,000,000 over 1928.

Class 1 railroads, he said, had a net railway operating income of $898,000,000, or a return of 3.41 per cent on property investment, compared with $1,275,000,000 net operating income for 1929. Gross operating incomes declined 15.5 per cent, he said.

Boy Sobs, Denying He Slew Girl, 16

Tells Father, Texas Cleric, They Quarreled, but He Didn't Fire.

Beaumont, Tex., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Robert Williams, 18, University of Texas sophomore, charged with slaying his former sweetheart, today was brought to Beaumont from Port Arthur, after he sobbed a declaration of his innocence to his father, a Methodist minister.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson, 16-year-old high school girl of Port Arthur, the youth's former fiancee, was found shot to death yesterday in the student's automobile. He told of having quarreled with the girl over attentions paid her by a married man, but denied the shooting.

The Rev. S. W. Williams, father of the youth, and presiding elder of the Austin district of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, arrived from Austin today and was permitted to talk to his son.

"I didn't do the shooting," Robert sobbed as he and his father embraced.

"I know you didn't," his father replied. He accompanied the youth to the Beaumont jail.

Miss Johnson was buried here this afternoon.

Prince of Monaco Insists on Order

Continues Martial Law Invoked When Rioting Attended His Return.

Monte Carlo, Monaco, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Determination to subdue the turbulent spirits among the inhabitants of this little principality was voiced today by Prince Louis.

The ruler of the tiny realm, famed principally for the gambling casino, told a French reporter why he had dropped constitutional guarantees and suspended the national and municipal councils last week when rioting attended his return from France.

"From now on," he said, "I am going to insure peace in this principality. The partial suspension of the constitution and the dismissal of the councils will last until calm is restored. Under no circumstances will we again permit disturbance of our foreign guests."

Monaco's standing army of 85 officers and men, mobilized for a week, was reported tired out because of its long vigil.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Scientist Finds Cities 'Sing' Noises in Different Voices

Acoustics Expert Says Device Records Chicago as Bass, London Barytone, New York Tenor; Would Abolish Auto Horn.

Cleveland, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Cities sing their songs in different kinds of voices, each city having a voice all its own. Chicago sings in bass, London in barytone and New York in tenor

This was revealed today by Dr. William Braid White, of Chicago, director of research in acoustics at the American Steel & Wire Co., a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation. Dr. White is exhibiting his sound portraits at the sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science this week.

The tone characteristics of cities were photographed by the Westinghouse oaiso, which reveals, Dr. White said, many more things about sound than the human ear can detect.

"The oaiso portraits of London's voice, or ground tone, show it to be a wave, shaped like the lower part of a rope necklace," he said. "The waves occur at intervals of 35 cycles a second.

"New York's sound wave is shaped like a necklace hung with fossil teeth. The sound vibrates at 60 cycles a second.

"Chicago's voice vibrates at 20 cycles. The wave looks like saw teeth.

"The pitch of London's voice is low C. New York's is like the singing of a wire that carries a 60-cycle alternating curent. Chicago's is like the hum of an automobile that is running without engine knocks.

"To the oaiso the sounds of the city and on the street level are a jumble. As you go up in a building these sounds become blended and take a definite form. About fifteen stories above the ground is where the characteristic ground tone of the city may be heard."

Dr. White said the ground tone depends on such things as the shapes of buildings, the presence of trolley wires and tracks and the number and sizes of lamp posts.

Photographs of the city sounds were obtained in connection with his work as chairman of the technical committee of the Chicago noise commission. He is studying city noises to sort those which are had for the ear from harmless ones.

The automobile horn, he said, should be abolished as a nuisance and for the sake of safe driving. If not abolished, it should be one one that says "I'm coming," rather than one that commands "Get out of the way!"

30,000 MASSACRED IN KANSU DISTRICT

GENERAL REVOLT GOAL

Shanghai, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Delayed Chinese dispatches from Lanchow said today that at least 30,000 Chinese in northwestern Kansu Province had been massacred in the last two months by roving armies of Mohammedans attempting to start a revolution against the Chinese government.

The dispatches said the Mohammedans were again seeking to obliterate all evidence of Chinese encroachments in that far western province of China by massacreing, recklessly burning towns and laying waste the countryside. Two years ago the Mohammedans, in opposing Chinese authority in Kansu, went on the war patch and pillaged, looted and murdered uncounted thousands of Chinese with medieval cruelty.

Assistance Is Implored.

The Mohammedans, the dispatches said, in an effort to prevent news of their depredations from getting to the outside world, had severed telegraph wires and censored the mails. The advices said a Lianghchow resident managed to escape to Langchow, capital of the province, where he finally was able to get word of the stricken province to the outside world.

The dispatches received here appealed to the Nationalist government to send troops to oppose the Mohammedans, adding "otherwise every living Chinese of northwest Kansu, where Mohammedan authority now reigns supreme, will be slain." Few details or towns destroyed were given.

An army of lawless Mohammedans, it was related, "entered one town of 20,000 inhabitants, looted everything and then killed in cold blood every person before burning the town with its streets piled high with corpses."

4,000 Men Shot Down.

The sack of another was described by saying the Mohammedans "entered another village, lined up 4,000 men, shot them all, then left, taking the women as prisoners. The children were abandoned, destined to freeze or starve to death."

Many districts near Liangchow were reported ravaged and the majority of Chinese there slain. The bodies were left unburied, scattered over the countryside where wolves were feeding nightly.

Leaders of the despoilers were identified as military generals, sworn enemies of the Chinese and the Nationalist government.

Northwest Kansu Province is one of the most isolated spots in the entire world. With communications into that area being practically nonexistent, it is possible that such affairs could be kept from the rest of the world, until weeks later. The region is also occasionally the scene of terrific earthquakes. Thousands sometimes are killed and entire mountains crumbled, the world being none the wiser until months later.

3 SONS OF BANKERS ARE MADE PARTNERS

Gilbert Kahn, John Schiff and Frederick Warburg Get New Honors.

KUHN, LOEB & CO. AIDS

New York, Dec. 27 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—New Year's Day will mark an important event in the lives of Gilbert W. Kahn, John M. Schiff and Frederick M. Warburg, for on that occasion they will assume the responsibility and honor pertaining to partnerships in Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the second largest private banking house in the United States.

All are sons of present partners of the banking house, and both the younger Mr. Schiff and the younger Mr. Warburg are grandsons of the late Jacob M. Schiff, one of the original members and former head of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Gilbert W. Kahn is the elder son of Otto H. Kahn, present head of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and was born July 18, 1903, in Morristown, N. J. He attended Princeton University and started business in the teller's cage of the Equitable Trust Co. in 1925. After a term studying business there he went to Europe to study methods of banking firms abroad, and has been associated with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., as an employe since September, 1927. On November 19, 1924, he married Miss Anne E. Whelan, daughter of the United Cigar Store magnate, and the union was called a $200,000,000 marriage, because of the fortunes of the families concerned.

A younger brother, Roger Kahn, turned from finance to lead an orchestra.

Frederick M. Warburg is the eldest son of Felix M. Warburg, a partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for many years. He was born October 14, 1897 in New York City and was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1919. His first business connection was with the American International Corporation after which he spent some time with the banking firm of M. M. Warburg & Co., in Hamburg, Germany. After this he spent five years with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and another four years with Lehman Brothers, another prominent private banking house.

John M. Schiff is a son of Mortimer L. Schiff, already a partner in the firm, and will represent the third partner of that name to serve with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. He was graduated from Yale in 1925 and then went to Oxford. He started business with the Bankers Trust Co., and later was with the Missouri Pacific Railroad, after which he joined Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

26 ARRESTED IN RAID ON GAMBLING BOATS

One of Ships and Quantity of Paraphernalia Are Taken Near Los Angeles.

SURPRISE AIDS CAPTURE

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Twenty-six men were in jail cells today and the gambling barge Johanna Smith was under seizure by authorities as the result of two swift blows struck against alleged gangsters operating two off-shore gambling ships. Seven of the men were taken from the Rose Isle, sister ship, which has not been seized.

Three speedboats which carried patrons of the games from shore to ship, and considerable gambling paraphernalia, also were seized by raiders Friday and Saturday nights.

The second and most effective raid last night found the Johanna Smith filled with patrons. Several hundred persons were ordered ashore under the escort of raiding officers.

Noncompliance was overcome by threats of arrest as material witnesses. The arrested men were identified as operators of the barges, dealers in gambling games, waiters, musicians and operators of passenger-carrying water taxis. Some were held in Long Beach jail cells, some in Los Angeles city jails and the remainder in the Los Angeles County Jail. All were booked under the California penal code dealing with violations of the gambling law.

District Attorney Leads Raid.

District Attorney Buron Fitts, who personally led 52 officers in the first raid, also directed the second attack. More than a score of his dry squad officers, antigangster squad men and police of Long Beach, off which the barges are anchored, swooped down on the ships last night. Games were in full tilt when the raiders stepped into the gambling salons, announcing to the crowd of well-dressed men and women that the ship was under seizure.

Machine guns mounted in steel cages were reported by the raiders to have bristled from the deck of the Johanna Smith. Following this discovery Fitts announced he was convinced the barges were the headquarters of gangsters.

He said sufficient firearms were found on board to "blow right out of the water" any shipload of would-be raiders. Surprise attack, he said, prevented resistance and resulted in seizures.

Sees Gangland Plot.

The supposed kidnaping of Deecke Caress, southern California gambler, Fitts said, he now believes was not a kidnaping but a part of a gangland plot to "muscle in" on the gambling ship business. Checks which Caress signed under coercion to obtain his release, Fitts said, were to have been cashed on the gambling ships. As the result of reports by Caress, Ralph Sheldon, former Chicago gangster, was arrested in a gun fight with Long Beach policemen.

The raids, Fitts added, were partly the result of his discovery that the ships' operations were being financed to some extent by former St. Louis, Mo., and Chicago gangsters. The county grand jury, he said, will be asked tomorrow to indict Sheldon on three counts of assault with intent to commit murder as the result of the gun battle. A Long Beach policeman was seriously wounded in the encounter.

Mischievous boys at Connecticut avenue near Cathedral avenue northwest threw a stone-loaded snowball at a passing street car, smashing a window, about 7:30 o'clock last night. Several passengers narrowly escaped being cut by the flying glass.

The accident occurred at Seventh and Q streets northwest. Clark was taken to Freedmen's Hospital for treatment.

An alleged hit-and-run driver was arrested last night after a chase of several blocks after he is said to have struck the automobile of Sergt. R. B. Jenkins, of the United States Park Police. The automobile was parked near the White House.

Sergt. Jenkins saw the crash and gave chase in his car which was only slightly damaged. The pursuit ended at Eleventh and E streets northwest where Joseph T. Gayhardt, 23 years old, of Ninth street, near I street southeast, was arrested. Gayhardt was charged with reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

HOPE FOR RECOVERY OF JOFFRE IS FADING

she said her father had lucid intervals alternating with unconsciousness. She felt he was only very slightly improved from his condition in the late afternoon.

The thousands outside the hospital marveled at the vitality of the aged soldier, who is suffering from arteritis, a disease which results in inflammation of the arteries, and when gangrene threatened Marshal Joffre's left leg was amputated above the knee a week ago yesterday.

Physicians felt that the other leg also should be removed, but feared to risk the operation because of the veteran soldier's weakened condition.

King George today telegraphed Lord Tyrell, British Ambassador, to express the king's profound regret over the illness of Marshal Joffre and asked the ambassador to follow the marshal's illness closely.

Genesis of World-Known Message Told by Friends

(Associated Press.)

The conditions under which Marshal Joffre wrote his world-known message to the French troops just before the Battle of the Marne, are revealed by Frenchmen, who quote the beloved marshal himself as their authority.

Many Frenchmen have always held that this famous "ordre du jour" has the beauty and sanctity of a prayer.

It begins:

"At a moment when begins a battle upon which depends the salvation of our country it behooves recalling to all that the time has passed to glance backward; our every effort must be employed in attacking and driving back the enemy."

Must Die, Not Retreat.

The message continues:

"Troops which are unable to advance must at whatever price hold the ground gained and die on the spot rather than retreat. With conditions as they are no weakness can be tolerated."

It was when copies of this message, autographed by Joffre, were being sold for the benefit of maimed soldiers that the marshal detailed its genesis.

"Everything was ready for a great battle," he said. "Every army corps knew exactly what was expected. Then it came to me that I should tell my troops what France expected from them and impart to them the collective ardor of sacrifice and the will and passion to conquer."

Made Some Changes.

He said when the text which he had outlined was submitted to him he made some modifications quickly and ordered the text telephoned to every section of the front. He naturally had other pressing problems, he said, and the short exhortation to France's army could not be permitted to absorb him long.

"Nevertheless," he said, "this word to my boys was an indispensable emanation of the flame which it was necessary to breathe into the armies. I had established my headquarters at Chatillon-Sur-Seine and words, like acts, had to be directed to forcing the enemy to fall back."

SISTERS ARE SLAIN; THEFT HELD MOTIVE

Warner, Muskogee County. Her sister was supervisor of music in the public schools of Norman and a graduate of the University of Oklahoma there.

The sisters had spent Christmas at Blackwell with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Griffith. They left at 5 o'clock this morning to return to their respective schools.

The bodies were found four hours later by C. C. Woods and his sons who were hunting. They were about 100 yards apart on opposite sides of the road.

Both had bene shot through the head. The elder sister also had been shot through the hand.

Jessie's clothing was disheveled as though she had struggled with her assailint. Officers said neither woman's body showed evidence of other mistreatment. Neighboring farmers recalled having seen a man drive away in a car answering the description of the slain women's automobile. None heard shots, however.

Griffith, the father, a member of the Blackwell police force, was a policeman at Tonkawa, Okla., during an oil boom there ten years ago. He was active in law enforcement, and officers said there was a possibility the slaying might have been the revenge of one of his enemies.

The bloodstained automobile taken from the teachers was found late today beside the highway, 11 miles north of Perry, Okla. A fingerprint expert was summoned from Newkirk, Kay County seat. Noble officers said the women apparently had been shot before they were dragged from the car.

Farmers in the vicinity said the automobile was abandoned this morning.

POSSE CATCHES MAN AFTER JAIL ATTACK

One of Gibsons, Who Tried to Get at Prisoner, Surrenders.

TWO BROTHERS HUNTED

Salem, Ind., Dec. 28 (A.P.).—County officers and citizens, aroused by the storming of the jail here last night by four brothers who attempted to get custody of two men accused of the feud slaying of their father, Patton Gibson, organized posses today, captured Fred Gibson, 38, one of the four, and continued search tonight for the two others.

Otis Gibson, the youngest brother, was killed in an exchange of bullets with Elmer Gerald, Salem town marshal, and the officer was seriously wounded. Gerald was reported as improving after an operation this morning. A bullet punctured his abdomen.

Sheriff Milton Trinkle was wounded in the knee and his wife, Ida, a deputy, was shot in the thigh when they refused to deliver the keys to the cell in which John and Pleas Spurlock were held in Patton Gibson's slaying two weeks ago.

Although armed when three automobile loads of officers and members of the American Legion surrounded his home, Gilfred Gibson surrendered on seeing he was outnumbered. Meanwhile, another posse continued to hunt Dan and Alonzo Gibson, reported in another part of the county.

28,730,000 TONS IN YEAR

Man Executes Parrot; Peace Reigns Again

Mexico City, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Elias Abbas has executed his once-cherished parrot in the presence of the police and tranquillity reigns once more in the Abbas household.

Elias is a Turkish peddler and liked his parrot, which always had treated him in a friendly and companion-like manner, but when he returned from his last trip to the State of Michoacan, the parrot greeted him with a cold distant stare and then squawked derisively "Pancho Lindo," ("Nice Frank").

Elias flew into a rage and began to beat his wife, Raquel Casim, demanding to know all about Frank. A policeman stepped in and brought man, wife and parrot to police headquarters, where Col. Casimiro Talamente heard Elias' story. After checking his mirth, the colonel investigated, finding "Frank" was a parrot vendor, the original owner of the bird.

Two Members Absent.

Hampered for weeks by lack of a full membership, the commission will not be able to poll more than nine of the elven members until after that date. Monte Lemann, New Orleans lawyer, and Judge William Grubb, of Birmingham, have sent word they can not be present.

Thus, final decisions could not be made, even if the body of the report was ready for submission to the President. Just before an adjournment was taken for Christmas word came from within the commission ranks that a final showdown on major questions was still ahead.

High suggested in his statement that the Nation's dry organizations are in need of a "fundamental overhauling," and that steps should be taken to include more business and professional members. At recent dry meetings in the Capital, he said, laymen were "decidedly on the outside," while "speeches and policies were made by the 'professionals'—a large quota of whom were ministers."

Urges Laymen's Conference.

"Why not call a layman's conference on prohibition?" he asked, with the "professionals," for a change, on the sidelines.

"Many of them (laymen) are silent and some of them are disgruntled, not because they are wavering about the prohibitoin cause, but, rather, because they are wavering about the prohibition leadership."

Unless a change is made, High concluded, there may be "political defections from the prohibition cause more serious than any we have witnessed up to now."

Senator Shepard did not name in his statement the senator who he said had criticized the proposal to have the eighteenth amendment ratified by State legislatures. He said the man's name had slipped his memory, but that even in making the objection the senator had regarded the matter "as a closed issue," since "the State convention method had been voted down by the House three years before, when the prohibition amendment was under discussion."

Sees Claim Nullified.

"Time and again, during the debate prior to the submission of the eighteenth amendment in 1917," the Texan said, "opponents of the amendment cited the fact that it would become valid, when passed by both houses of Congress and ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States."

Cherrington's statement said in part:

"When the wets attack prohibition because liquor criminals are being arrested and jailed, they are nullifying their own arguments that prohibition can not be enforced. The recent statement of one of the wet groups, accusing President Hoover of disseminating misinformation when he said that prohibition's contribution to increased lawlessness was negligible, must be read in the light of the group's opposition to law observance and to law enforcement and to President Hoover himself."

ROYAL MEEKER ATTACKS BREAD LINE CUSTOM

Palliatives Said to Fail Solving Jobless Problems

Give Alms Indirectly to Employers as Well as Employes Is View—Balance Between Production and Consumption True Remedy.

By ROYAL MEEKER
(Formerly U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics).

Special to the Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 28.—Mr. E. F. McGrady, the legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, says that the Federation "maintains that every man and woman willing to work should be guaranteed an opportunity for employment. The wage earner has the same right to security of employment that the stockholder has to the security of dividend payments. Both make investments in the industry." Although the federation has consistently opposed "social insurance," including unemployment insurance, it now advocates that industries should set aside reserves in good times to pay wages to idle workers during lean years.

This proposal is unemployment insurance administered by industries. Whether the federation leaders expect all employers to adopt the plan of setting up unemployment reserves without the compulsory spur of legislation is not made clear. Judging by past experience, we may be sure that very few industries or individual employers will establish unemployment funds unless obliged to do so by law.

Fluctuations in factory employment give some slight indication of the ups and downs of business and the need for systematic effort to stabilize employment and to care for the unemployed.

Little Progress Made.

It is true that but little progress has been made in the direction of creating systematic means for either preventing unemployment or caring for the unemployed. Our backwardness in this, the most important aspect of present-day life, comes from our overemphasized individualism and our failure to understand the nature and the causes of most unemployment.

Unemployment, seasonal, cyclical, or continuing, is the most serious defect in the present-day economic organization. The job comes first. Before the intricate and innumerable problems of wage rates, hours, division of labor, rate of production, conditions of labor, &c., can come into existence, there must be jobs and workers doing these jobs.

Unemployment means involuntary idleness from whatever cause, and includes besides the jobless, all those who for any reason are employed less than full time. The unemployed include, then, all jobless workers, all part time and irregular workers, and all workers who for any reason are not fully employed while actually on the job—those unemployed on the job, so to speak. Unemployment concerns only those able and willing to work. It has nothing to do with the chronically unemployable, and those who do not or will not work.

Lack of Balance.

A large number of names have been used to explain unemployment, the most hackneyed being "overproduction," "underconsumption," "underproduction," "changes in the price level," "technical improvement." All these causes can be included under one head, namely, a lack of balance between production and consumption. Five causes contribute to this condition:

1. Lack of planning of production to meet and not to exceed consumption requirements.
2. Faulty distribution and utilization of the national income, causing alternating periods of oversaving and overinvestment in production or intermediate goods accompanied by underspending and underconsumption of immediate or final consumption goods, followed by overspending and undersaving.
3. Wide variation in the general price level, which means changes in the purchasing power of money.
4. Unforseen calamities, including marked overproduction of some commodities as well as destruction of lives and goods by earthquakes, floods, storms, droughts, famines, &c.
5. Technological improvements due to new machines, methods, management and organization.

Until very recently, most persons knew but very little about the causes of unemployment. Hence the methods of treating this social-industrial disease, or accident, are for the most part, merely palliatives, not cures or preventives.

The first and favorite palliative is the time-honored and dishonorable institution of the soup-kitchen and the breadline. The only excuse for this practice is that even the bitter bread and thin soup of charity do keep men from dying of starvation. So long as present conditions prevail, both the unemployed employe and the unemploying employer will continue to be the unwilling or the unwitting recipients of our doles of bread and soup. The employer whose discharged workers are supported by public or private charity during depressions receives alms indirectly, but just as truly as those who eat the bread and drink the soup of charity. The "Great American Dole System" is a very poor palliative, indeed, and it is our shame that it is still a chief reliance in every industrial emergency.

Recognize Need for Buyers.

Next, there is the odd-job palliative. This has less demerit than free bread and soup, but it hasn't very much merit. Reconditioning and rebuilding plants are not odd jobs. The odd job is merely one means of keeping workers from starvation or complete pauperization during an industrial depression. Again, so long as industrial and political leaders do not tackle the causes of unemployment, the odd job with all its inadequacies will continue as a method of dealing with unemployment.

Within the past few months the "buy it now" palliative has emerged. Merchants have discovered the power of "buying power" and are urging consumers to buy now, whether or not they really need things or can pay for them. This palliative at least recognizes the need for buyers to absorb surplus goods, but its merit is slight indeed. The great danger is that large numbers of people may be persuaded to acquire things more or less useless by promising payments which they can never meet.

Wage maintenance is another palliative. This palliative has decidedly limited applicability. The employer can not pay wages unless he has money with which to pay. Employers who maintain rates and employment out of surpluses accumulated during prosperous years are really practicing a form of unemployment insurance. This form of spreading workers' earnings over lean years as well as fat years may be good or bad according to the plan used and the conditions.

Most employers have no surpluses available and can maintain wage rates in the face of dwindling incomes only by cutting down his labor costs by substituting machines and methods for men and by discharging, laying

BOND PRICE LEVELS RISE IN NEW YORK

Sharp Fluctuations Noted in Rails; Remaining Groups Steadier.

FOREIGNS ARE WEAK

Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange continued to rise in price level last week, closing the week with a net gain of 0.57 per cent. There was weakness early in the week. The sharp reversal in the trend of bond prices came following the December 17 low, when the index was at 98.45.

The pronounced rise in bond prices that came in the four sessions following December 17, after a definite depression, was short lived. The index steadied at the higher level during the two sessions that preceded Christmas, suffering a minor loss of only 0.06 per cent. The closing session last week found prices again on the upward move, making sufficient gains to wipe out losses and close the week with a gain of 0.88 per cent over the December 17 low.

Bond values traded dropped by 8 per cent, with foreign government bonds suffering the sharpest drop. Trading in rails was up, reaching the high since the week ended October 24; utilities and industrials were off by a slight margin, and U. S. Government bonds held steady.

Both first and second grade rails on December 22 showed gains of nearly 3 per cent over their December lows. But reaction to the sharp upswing in prices was most acute in the rails groups. First grade rails, at last week's close, 0.4 per cent off from the week's high, showed a net gain over the week of 1.1 per cent. Second grade rails closed last week with a gain of 1.5 per cent over the preceding week's close but off by 0.3 per cent from last week's high.

The remaining groups showed steadier price movement last week with industrials up by 0.69 per cent, utilities up by 0.31 per cent, foreign government up by 0.12 per cent and U. S. Government up by 0.06 per cent.

HOW TO RECOGNIZE A GOOD UTILITY BOND

No. 7 of a series of advertisements

The Tree Continues to Grow

ASSETS and earnings are usually the first consideration of the bond investor. But equally important, if not more important, is the assurance of continued earnings in the future.

The surest evidence of continued earnings is the steady and substantial growth in the past—and the visible evidence of continued usefulness and growth in the future.

There has never been a year in the electric light and power industry which has shown a decline in earnings. And yet to-day after 40 years of growth the average home uses only one-quarter of the electric current it could use to advantage—and 35% of industry is still without central station service. Highway lighting, growth in airports and airways, and electrification of farms will further contribute to the expanding use of electricity.

The gas industry, with a production greater during the last ten years than during all the previous 110 years of the industry, is constantly developing new outlets for gas consumption. House heating is in its infancy. Refrigeration, automatic water heating and incineration are outstanding opportunities for building up gas load. It is estimated that gas plants are carrying less than 10% of the industrial load available.

27,385 new investors in 1930—growth to a total of 217,524 during a period marked by investment hesitancy—gauges the public appreciation of the future earning possibilities of the Associated System. On an "overall" basis, Associated Gas and Electric Company earnings after depreciation are 2.13 times bond interest requirements compared with an average of 1.89 times for the bonds of 20 other leading utilities as a group.

The high investment merit of Associated Gas and Electric Company Debenture bonds is convincingly demonstrated by our analysis based on tests such as are used by banks, insurance companies and investment banking houses for determining the value of public utility bonds.

The Goofus Repeater

The Goofus Repeater sits down at the club;
He's loquacious; he gives you a pain;
He tells you the tale of how he caught a whale,
And then tells it over again.

He just takes the floor, tells how he won the war,
How he fought sixty men to a draw;
And how he shot the bear—well, I'm sure I don't care

THE BANK INQUIRY.

The proposed investigation of the banking situation by a special Senate committee furnishes an opportunity for dangerous mischief or constructive service. Financial circles are agreed that the banking system in the United States ought to be overhauled, to some extent, and it is well known that Congress will take no step toward that end until an extensive investigation has been made to determine the fundamental deficiencies of the system. If this investigation is to be a sweeping inquiry into the shortcomings of the present banking laws it ought to be a salutary influence in the restoration of normal economic conditions.

On the other hand, if the special committee intends to play politics with the present situation, its efforts will be of no value in the correction of existing banking legislation, but will only add to the pall of depression which is hanging over the country. The first task the committee has set for itself gives a suggestion that its inquiry may not be tainted with partisanship. Methods of examining banks are to be scrutinized to determine whether examiners have been lax in their duties. It is intimated that an attempt will be made to show that many banks would not have failed if the supervision by the Comptroller of the Currency had been more rigid. From this point to a partisan attack upon the administration is but a step.

There is urgent need for a scientific inquiry into banking conditions. The number of bank failures is steadily increasing. It is estimated that for 1930 the number of suspensions will run as high as 1,000, including more than 100 national banks. This does not mean, of course, that the banking system has broken down as a result of the depression, but that the depression and the drought of last summer has put a greater strain upon a banking system that was already inadequate to meet modern conditions of business.

Hundreds of banks were failing each year before the depression set in. Most of them were small country banks that had insufficient backing to meet the demands upon them. The day of the small country bank is passing. Towns are no longer isolated, either geographically or financially. In these days of consolidation it has been found that banks with strong central backing are in a better position to stand the strain of crop failures, regional disasters, &c., much better than local institutions. Comptroller John W. Pole has repeatedly recommended that national banks be allowed to establish branches within the trade area in which they operate.

Most bank failures of today have roots reaching far back beyond the depression. If the Senate investigation is to be of any value it must dip down under the surface and concern itself with these primary causes. Maladministration, if any, is incidental to the inquiry. The basic need is for facts on which amendments to the McFadden act can be formulated. Bank failures may continue to increase until the fundamental defects of the act are corrected. If the committee is disposed to make political capital out of the duty to which it has been assigned, its work will end in controversy and further bewilderment. If constructive, the investigation will be of great value. What does the committee intend to do?

THE DEMOCRATIC FEUD.

The Democrats in Congress have thoroughly enjoyed the family row on the Republican side, but they are beginning to wonder when their own feud will overshadow the Republican squabble. They are disgusted with Republican insurgent treachery. They permitted Senator Norris and other insurgents to lead them for more than a year, and gained nothing, not even the loyal cooperation of the insurgents. Now Senators Norris and Brookhart, having no further use for their Democratic dupes, announce that they will vote with the Republicans in the organization of the Senate. The Democrats also learn that Senator Shipstead and Representative Kvale, Farmer Laborites, will vote with the Republicans.

So Democratic hopes of securing control of the Seventy-second Congress are extinguished. The caucus of House Democrats, called for February 28 by Mr. Garner, Democratic leader, may as well be called off. It can not change a minority into a majority.

The Senate will be organized by Republicans. Of course, the regulars and insurgents will fight among themselves, but they will combine whenever necessary to keep the Democrats out of power. The insurgents are very careful not to kick themselves out of the Republican party, which would be equivalent to kicking themselves out of office. Stalwart regulars would be delighted to see such rebels as Norris and Brookhart take the plunge, but Norris and Brookhart stick like burrs.

The coalition of Democrats and insurgents in the Senate made plenty of mischief for the Republican party, but the Democrats gained nothing by it. At the time when their unnatural allies could help them to throw the Republicans out, the allies desert them.

A sharp cleavage among Democrats is developing. Some of them cling to the idea that cooperation with the insurgents will somehow bring advantage to the Democratic party. Others perceive that the Democratic party has nothing to gain by consorting with either faction in the enemy camp. They agree that if Democratic cooperation with the insurgents would help to split the Republican party it would be a good strategic move, but they point to the closing of the Republican ranks as soon as the danger of Democratic control of the Senate comes into the picture. So this contingent of Democrats rightly concludes that flirting with the insurgents is a losing game.

The Democratic quarrel really revolves about the wet and dry controversy. The leader of the Democrats in the Senate is a dry, opposed to repeal of the eighteenth amendment. He is utterly out of harmony with the Democratic national chairman, who is working diligently to commit the party to repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Some of Senator Robinson's party colleagues would like to displace him. They feel that the sooner he is displaced the easier it will be for the wets to win when the tug of war over prohibition takes place between Northern and Southern Democrats. In their opinion, if the Democratic party is to take the wet side and nominate a wet for President it must shake off Senator Robinson before he takes advantage of his party leadership to emphasize the fact that the veto-wielding South is devoted to the dry cause.

This fundamental Democratic fissure will be made clear within a few days when the Wickersham report is made public. If that report favors the eighteenth amendment and fails to recommend amendment of the Volstead act, Senator Robinson and other Democratic drys will take their stand upon it, as faithful representatives of the sentiment of their States. Democratic wets will, of course, attack the report and intensify their opposition to the eighteenth amendment. Soon it will become apparent that there is not room enough in the Democratic leadership to accommodate both Senator Robinson and John J. Raskob. If Senator Robinson should be sacrificed it will be the signal for revolt throughout the dry South.

The New York Times frankly acknowledges that "the Democratic party has troubles enough of its own, as will surely appear later." Prohibition, it adds, "worked havoc with the Democratic party in 1928," and its only hope now is that this "irrepressible question" will work havoc with the Republican party also. But the havoc to the Democratic party is a fact, while the havoc to the Republican party is only a hope.

With the fiasco of Madison Square Garden and the havoc of 1928 before them, and with empty hands and betrayal as the only fruits of their association with Republican insurgents, it is little wonder that Democrats in the Senate and House are hoping that Republican squabbles will divert attention from the feud that is developing in the Democratic party.

MUSSOLINI'S SECRET POLICE.

Organization of a secret police in Italy casts an ominous shadow over Fascism. Civil liberties, as they are understood in the United States, have not been known under the Mussolini dictatorship. A rigid censorship has kept the people in ignorance of actual conditions, and opposition to the Fascist regime has been crushed by hasty trials, banishments and other severe penalties. Mussolini even originated a new puppet legislature organized in such a way that the people may vote, but without a chance of electing any one but Black Shirts. Italy has endured this and seems to have made considerable economic progress. Now the Ovra, secret police force under the direct command of Mussolini, arrives on the scene.

It is the function of the Ovra to protect the Fascist system. Reports from Rome indicate that its operations will not be unlike those of the Ogpu, that agency of terrorism whose duty it is to expose the enemies of communism in Russia. A semiofficial Italian newspaper says: "The Ovra steps in before crimes are committed, not afterward. It is silent and active, striking down the guilty before they have a chance to budge. Then it is for the high tribunal to have its say." Apparently, the Ovra will not be hampered by the necessity of complying with the law. It will function outside of the law, bringing down every foe who dares to lift his hand against the Black Shirt dictatorship.

Mussolini is taking this means of strengthening his grip upon Italy. To the outside world, however, his move seems to betray weakness. Is the cause of Fascism so desperate that the Duce must resort to terrorism to protect his political machine? Instead of moving toward a stabilized constitutional government, the Fascist regime finds it necessary to terrorize the people in order to retain power.

The recent trial of several persons accused of "plotting against the constitutional order of Italy" gave an inkling of organized opposition to the dictatorship. The National Alliance, composed of thousands of "liberal intellectuals," has launched a campaign "to give the Italian population the facts about their own country which they have not had for six years—the length of the present Fascist censorship." Leaders of the movement declare that it will go on in spite of prosecutions.

It is not to be supposed that Mussolini or any other individual can keep public opinion of a modern nation bottled up in an airtight compartment for an indefinite period. Italy has felt the pangs of the depression as well as the rest of the world. Resentment against the dictatorship is natural. If Mussolini attempts to stamp out criticism by the use of terror he will alienate the sympathy of the people. It is not impossible that his attempt to curb the spouting of geysers here and there may prepare the way for the outburst of a volcano later on.

Treasurer Nutt, of the Republican national committee, calls for an apology from Senator Nye for calling a committee deposit a "slush fund." As it was only $50,000, an abject apology is in order.

ULSTER COUNTY GAZETTE

By HENRY S. PARSONS, of the Library of Congress, in Antiques.

When does an old newspaper cease to be a bibliographical rarity and become an antique? The question was recently raised at the Library of Congress in connection with the receipt of a document so rare as to be perhaps unique—a genuine specimen of the Ulster County Gazette for January 4, 1800. Accompanied as it is by a specimen of the preceding issue, for December 28, 1799, and one of the succeeding issues for January 11, 1800, this happy discovery constitutes the most noteworthy recent addition to the library's large collection of early American newspapers.

The Ulster County Gazette was established May 5, 1798, at Kingston, New York, by Samuel Freer & Son, as a weekly paper supporting the Federal party. Publication in the original form continued until 1803, when the title was changed to Ulster Gazette and the publisher became Samuel S. Freer, the "son" of the original partnership. Among the two hundred or more purveyors of news in the States along the Atlantic seaboard, this journalistic effort occupied no very important position. Its news items, aside from local gossip, may be found duplicated in the pages of many of its contemporaries. Yet, today, one issue of the Ulster County Gazette commands a wider and more interested attention than all of its once more influential rivals put together. This is the issue for January 4, 1800. On its second page appears John Marshall's address on the death of Washington, delivered before the House of Representatives. Marshall concluded with the House resolutions drawn up by Gen. Henry Lee, father of Gen. Robert E. Lee. It is here that we first encounter the famous phrase, "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." Then comes an address of condolence by the Speaker of the House, delivered to President John Adams, and the President's response, the Senate's message on the same subject, and its official acknowledgment. The latter is continued on page three, where, in addition, we find a dispatch from George Town, under date of December 20, giving a full account of Washington's funeral.

This number of the Gazette has, on many occasions, been more or less faithfully reproduced; and has become famous largely because no original from which the copies might have been made has hitherto been found. The Library of Congress itself has examples of 26 different versions of these reprints. A recent publication of the New York Public Library, carefully compiled by R. W. G. Vail from available collections, lists a known total of 64 spurious editions. This extensive series began during the first half of the nineteenth century, perhaps as early as 1825. In 1876, the year of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, thousands of fresh copies were sold as souvenirs. Meanwhile, librarians had so long watched for the discovery of a genuine original that they had given up hope of such a miracle.

Over a period of some decades, the Library of Congress has encouraged the submission of copies of the Gazette for examination. Always the specimens that came proved to be spurious, until the hope of finding an original grew so faint that its expression could elicit nothing more than a pitying smile. A moment of optimism dawned when it was learned that the Freer Art Gallery in Washington had unearthed a copy among the possessions of its founder, Charles Land Freer, a relative of the Kingston publisher; but it quickly subsided into the usual disappointment. Hence, when a modest note from Mrs. James Lydon, jr., of Suffern, New York, asked for an opinion concerning three copies of the Ulster County Gazette, it was only the magic three that differentiated her request from hundreds of others. When Mrs. Lydon's package was opened, it revealed copies for December 28, 1799; January 4 and January 11, 1800.

And these met all tests. They are printed on rag paper, with the same watermark throughout, slender parallel lines, 1 1-1,6 to 1 3-16 inches apart. The title is set in italic capitals. The print shows the blurred edges of hand-press work. The old style s appears where it should. Spelling and initial are correct in the Last Notice.

So the long search for the lost Ulster County Gazette for January 4, 1800, ends triumphantly, with the discovery of three missing copies instead of one; for, though only a single member of the trio had risen to fame, its companions had also been counted among the irretrievable strays. Consigned now to the safe-keeping of the Library of Congress they bring a long-standing mystery story to a satisfactory ending.

JEFFERSON PICKED A SCULPTOR.

When Jefferson imported the French sculptor, Jean Houdon, in 1784, to execute a statute of Washington, there existed the opinion that the author of the Declaration had better stick to statecraft. A few days ago Houdon's marble bust portrait of the Countess de Sabran was sold for $80,000 to a New York collector, according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Previously the small bust of the artist's little daughter was bought by Mrs. E. S. Harkness for $245,000, thought to be the highest price ever paid for a piece of sculpture.

Jefferson's ability to recognize Houdon's genius and his wisdom in introducing it on American shores when our art was in its infancy was part of his own genius. It was but one aspect of the greatness of the mind of the Master of Monticello, that kindly democrat who might have been found in his study at work on an essay on political philosophy, and then again among his plants gathering seeds for a friend overseas.

TIME.

Time is the space man fills with mirth and song,
Deep reading, study, toil, delight or sin.
Empty the hours, the days and months come in
To leave us laden with what right or wrong
We place upon them as they move along,
And are recorded as we lose or win;
Silent is Time. The clatter and the din
Are but the echoes of the human throng.

Time never stays to question or advise;
It serves alike the greatest and the least.
The villain shares it with the gentle priest.
This moment one is born, another dies.
Or at his worst all happiness destroy.

You Don't Insult a Man by Laughing at His Reflection in a Freak Mirror.

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

DR. HENRY VAN DYKE, making a speech to a gathering of businessmen, said that the awarding of the Nobel prize to Sinclair Lewis for such novels as "Main Street," "Elmer Gantry" and "Arrowsmith" was an insult to America.

The good doctor, himself a literary craftsman of no little skill, probably reasons this way: The Sinclair Lewis books insult America; the gentlemen who award the Nobel prizes doubtless considered the books as correct portrayals of typical Americans; therefore, in accepting the Lewis testimony and rewarding it, they insulted America by giving their approval to slanderous descriptions of her people.

But fiction is not a scientific report of facts. Literature is not a collection of evidence. The most untruthful description of a mule might be literature, and the most accurate description might be no more than a dull and unlovely collection of words.

None but the stupid, here or abroad, regard the Lewis books as literally true. They quite obviously exaggerate the faults and idiocies of exceptional types. That is the business of caricature. Cervantes did not attempt literal and exact description of typical Spaniards. He mocked a type—caricatured a minority—and all the world recognized "Don Quixote" as a caricature. Yet the critics accept the work as literature to this day.

The work of Sinclair Lewis is called "realism," but very little of it is real. Realism is truth, not part of the truth—the whole apple, not the rotten spot on one side.

Lewis selected types easily made ridiculous—types in some measure representative because they are in some particular like all of us—and made asses of them all by exposing their worst and hiding their best. He did it with consummate skill, and the result was literature worthy of a place on the shelf beside Swift.

It should be added in fairness that he was not trying to produce literature. He was trying to write something that would sell. Having produced many "duds," he followed the advice of Henry Mencken and tapped the reservoir of bitterness that many years of failure had filled to overflowing.

The result was satire of the finest; and though it enraged the 100 per centers, it was literature and it was profitable. Rewarding its merit insulted America no more than praise of a parody insults the original.

PRO AND CON

New York Herald Tribune.

One section of the Jones-White shipping act provides that "no common carrier by water" shall "use a fighting ship," the term being defined to mean a vessel used in a particular trade "for the purpose of excluding, preventing or reducing competition by driving another carrier out of said trade." Violation is punishable by a fine of $25,000. Furthermore, in case of violation by a noncitizen, the Secretary of Commerce is directed to refuse to the offending carrier the right of entry into any port of the United States.

Representative White has now announced that the House merchant marine committee will begin hearings in January upon his bill designed to extend this section to meet the peculiar situation produced by alien efforts to "skim the cream" off the winter tourist traffic to Havana. Mr. White regards foreign-flag ships entered in the winter run from New York to the Caribbean as "virtually pirates," since they are withdrawn for use elsewhere during the unprofitable summer months, while the established American lines must maintain all-year-round service. Most Americans will agree with him.

Intolerable, But Unavoidable.

Topeka Capital.

Executive Chairman Lucas says that the actions of Senator Norris have become "intolerable," but there doesn't seem to be anything to do about it, like many other "intolerable" things that are nevertheless tolerated.

What's Jim Ham Doing?

Atlanta Constitution.

Senator-elect Jim Ham Lewis is singularly silent. He must be engaged in incubation.

Strange Bedfellows.

Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Norris has now announced he will elect to sta in the party, from which point of vantage he can be trusted to give as good as he gets when it comes to an exchange of views as to what makes a good Republican. For, after all, if the Eastern Republicans claim to be the heirs to Lincoln's high hat, the Western boys have a legitimate claim to his worn and shabby cape. And in this casting of lots for the traditional garments the Democrats are justified in raising their hopes that they will find themselves in 1932 in full possession of the garb of Thomas Jefferson, which certainly ought to cover an Al Smith and a Tom Heflin if Lincoln's haberdashery protects the frames of a Norris and a Bingham.

Prof. Dewey Forgets Prohibition.

New York World.

Mr. Dewey does not seem to have taken account of the prohibition issue. This issue divides the followers of Norris from the urban voters of the East more deeply than any project of social planning unites them. It is true that Mr. Norris personally was able to support a wet in 1928, but there is no evidence as yet that he could carry his constituents with him on a wet program. On the other hand, unless we are greatly mistaken, Mr. Dewey's new party would not stand the ghost of a chance in the cities unless it was unequivocally for the abandonment of Federal prohibition.

Norris Never Looked.

Indianapolis News.

Senator Norris is out with a question as to whether even the President is a Republican, indicating that he did not read all his ballot when he voted in 1928.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Loyal Men to the Front; Quitters to the Rear," Suggested as Slogan for Republican Party.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his action in cooperating with the Democrats in the Senate in opposition to practically every important measure sponsored by President Hoover, as well as by his action in aligning himself with Tammanyites in the 1928 presidential election campaign, Senator Norris has forfeited whatever claim he may have had to calling himself a Republican. There are times, of course, when a statesman, acting from patriotic motives, may find it necessary to stand out prominently in opposition to his party, but no such occasion has arisen to justify Senator Norris in his opposition to a Republican President or to any important Republican measures, except as he, in his own way, has tried to justify his actions to his own satisfaction. A statesman contends for a principle, regardless of the consequences to himself, politically or otherwise; a politician aims at notoriety and popular applause. The niche which the Nebraskan would occupy in this connection can be readily judged after listening to one of his speeches in the Senate.

The time has arrived when the Republican party leaders should rid the party of what Mr. Lucas evidently considers "party traitors." This is necessary to further Republican party success in the Nation and in some of the States. There is every indication that the presidential election contest in 1932 will be an intensely bitter one between the two old parties for supremacy in the national Government. On one side will be arrayed the forces of law and order, looking to national advancement and moral betterment; on the other side, the forces seeking to undo what has already been accomplished, under difficulties, by the great moral agencies of the country.

In face of this situation, the Republican party can not afford to take chances with those whose loyalty is questioned, whatever their political dimensions, great or small. "Loyal men to the front; quitters to the rear," should be the Republican party shibboleth from now on.

From present appearances, the Democratic party will have nothing to offer the American people of a genuine character in the next few years, either in the way of wise measures or of a presidential candidate, that will commend the candidate or the party to patriotic citizens or to the business interests of the country. With the party under Tammany control and with the Democratic South floating as a tail to the Tammany kite, self-respecting citizens of all parties will be compelled, if disposed to give expression to their sentiments, to align themselves with the Republican party, or combine as best they may as an independent party. Which shall it be?

INDEPENDENT.

Washington, D. C.

Why Surrender Any Part of American Independence, Asks a Stalwart Citizen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For several years I have read with grateful interest your strong contention against the entanglement of our country with the affairs of European nations and other countries. During all this time I have been puzzled to know why it has become necessary for our nation to change its method of dealing with foreign countries. For considerably more than 100 years we had been carrying on business with foreign nations through what was called diplomacy. We had representatives at the capitals of other nations, and when any question of great importance came up it was usually settled through what was known among the nations as diplomacy. Why has it become necessary to change from that American policy?

Through a revolution more than a century ago, we fairly and honorably won national independence, and we have since grown strong and great under that status. Why should we surrender one iota of that independence? Who is demanding it? What shall we expect to gain by having one American judge associated with ten or a dozen foreign judges in a so-called world court? As a native American citizen, I am anxious to know just why it is necessary for our Nation to enter into such entanglements with outside countries. I was truly pleased with a recent letter in The Post signed by "America" touching upon this matter. His argument was strong and convincing; and I sincerely hope that you will not abandon your efforts to keep us out of entangling alliances with other countries. If there is any concealed reason as to why we should mix up in the world court, I hold that it should be made known to us. There seems to be a hidden hand in that matter.

JOHN R. WEATHERS.

Would Create Old Age Pension Fund by Government Sale of Liquor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The eighteenth amendment has become the football of opposing camps fighting for profits and supremacy. While the majority of the people are in this fight for ideals, others see only money and power in the issue. There is a huge fortune flowing into the hands of many that want to keep prohibition. Many of those that want the repeal would like to get on the receiving end of the thing. The only solution is to make profits impossible for individuals.

Propose to the people of the United States the creation of a pension fund under a Secretary of Pensions. Turn the manufacture and distribution of beverages over to that department. That department is to issue stamps marked "Pension Fund." Anyone desiring to purchase beverages can do so with these stamps only.

Complete control can be kept of sales and abuses. We would soon settle the question of unemployment and poverty for the man or woman over forty years of age. Much of our distressing crime wave would disappear, for I feel the fear of an old age in poverty is responsible for much of our corruption and social unrest.

THE office of Warden Robert Barr, in the Tombs, New York's historic city prison, will become a broadcasting studio on New Year's afternoon. Desks, chairs and fixtures will be summarily removed, and blankets from cell bunks, hastily draped along the walls, will become the acoustical adjuncts of a thirty-minute radio program by the Inmates Band of the New York State Reformatory on Hart's Island (WEAF network, 2:30 p. m.)

The inmates will go to New York from Hart's Island especially for the broadcast and will eat their New Year's dinner in the Tombs before making the radio debut. Studio attendants will be guards, stationed at the doors of the warden's office.

Beginning this morning, Gene and Glenn, well-known to WTAM, Cleveland, listeners, will replace Phil Cook in his 8 o'clock period. Cook will continue his evening broadcast (WRC 7:30 o'clock). Gene and Glenn will introduce Washington listeners to their two famous characters "Jake and Lena," during this period.

If Mussolini's voice is received clearly in the United States, short wave transmitters at WGY, Schenectady, KDKA, Pittsburgh, and KGO, San Francisco, will endeavor to boost it around the rest of the world.

THE newest of radio instruments was a special feature of a concert given by the Philadelphia Orchestra. The French name for it is "onde musical." The manner of playing it seems to be pretty much the same as the Theremin, which apparently is operated by waving the hands over it in the air.

In the lower notes the new instrument sounds like a cello, in the middle range like a saxophone, and in the upper register like a flute.

No amount of trouble, apparently, can deter a radio fan who wants to see his favorite performer. Henry Burbig was host to a crippled boy recently. The boy traveled two hours from his home in Staten Island, despite the fact that he was unable to rise from the wheel chair in which he came into the studio.

Tony Cabooch, One-Man Radio Show, will make some pre-mature "New Year's Revolutions" tonight over WABC at 7:45 o'clock.

Mrs. Norman Ogden Whitehouse, former Princess Tamara Bagration of Russia, will "pour" at the radio tea tomorrow afternoon (WRC, 5 o'clock)

Ezra Meeker's 100th anniversary will be celebrated tonight. The speakers will be the Secretary of the Interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur, and Miss Anne Morgan (WRC, 10:30 o'clock).

ANOTHER broadside against an talk injected into radio pro- excessive amount of advertising grams has been delivered by Dr. Lee De Forest.

"It is worse on the West Coast than in the East," he said. "One of the largest manufacturers of vacuum tubes told me that this year their business will not be more than $7,000,000. Last year it totaled net $27,000,000.

"I attribute much of the current slump not to the general business depression, but to the fact that the public are not using radio sets as much. They are tired of all the sales talk."

Recently a New York announcer was forced to cut his time for dinner to half an hour in order to hurry back to the station and announce that "The next program comes from Chicago, Ill." After that he had nothing more to do for an hour.

Speaking from London, Lord Snakey broadcast his views on India. Wouldn't that give you the creeps?

Dare Interprets the MODE

Paris, Dec. 28.

O-O-O-OH, the joys of being a lovely lady in these hectic times when everything is done to enhance our beauty and our romantic glamour!

And about the most glamorous, and certainly the quaintest aid we have this year is gloves! Especially evening gloves. Some of the new ones I have seen are of enchanting black Chantilly lace, fingerless like grandmamma's mitts, and extending from just below the thumb to halfway up the upper arm. There they have a frill, and under this frill is a band of narrow silk elastic which keeps them in place.

Some couturiers have elaborated on this theme. They make the same fingerless gloves, but of white or eggshell lace, and add two or three frills at the top. And in keeping with the importance of jeweled brilliance this season, one house outlines the design in a two-inch border in palest mauve sequins! And gives miladi a huge matching lace-and-sequin hankie to carry.

For the more mature woman very long black suede and glace kid gloves are being worn with black, white or delicately colored evening gowns. I have seen many of these gloves embroidered in rhinestones, and one delightful pair, plain black suede, had a diamond monogram on the left wrist. These were worn by a stately white-haired lady in the plainest of white velvet evening gowns. And few of the dancers there received more approving glances than she!

• • • •

Every inch of this warmly glowing red-orange crepe marocain dress spells the utmost in chic! From its odd, high collar of mink to its jagged hemline it is entirely charming. And one of the reasons I sketched it for you today is to show what delightful things Martial et Armand did with a diagonal peplum. Its just the gayest, cheerfulest little frock—one of those that's ready to laugh its way through just about any informal occasion!

• • • •

You're in for a mighty pleasant surprise if you rush your stamped, self-addressed envelope off to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet! For we have solved a problem that is close to every Lovely Lady's heart—how to afford a really lovely and expensive evening gown for just one particular party! The whole secret is that we explain how to transform it into a beautiful and graceful afternoon frock with very little additional work, and absolutely no more material than is used for its evening self, which is four yards. Think of it!

O-o-oh, what a chic hat is this, with cut felt plaques for trimming across the back of the neck! And how clever the necklace of the same felt plaques!

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF December 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:15 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

The astrological portents of December 29 indicate a time of bustle and activity, as well as many unexpected changes. Some of these changes will inure to your benefit; others to your disadvantage. After sunset, more settled conditions will prevail.

A child born on this December 29 will be popular at school, and the adulation that it will receive will not spoil, but inspire it. No brilliant achievement can be prognosticated, but it will go through life enjoying the affectionate regard of its fellows.

You, if born on December 29, possess great ambition, as well as the ability and perseverance to gratify it, if you do not allow yourself to be diverted by pleasure-loving proclivities to neglect it. You are endowed with more than ordinary intelligence. You have vision. You are as keen as mustard, and with it all, your personality, although compelling, is pleasing. You always secure your ends by diplomacy and persuasion, never by forceful measures. Your smile wins, when a frown would lose.

You find it hard at times to tread "the straight and narrow." Of a congenial disposition, you experience difficulty in resisting the blandishments of those who would entice you from your self-chosen field of endeavor. As a rule, your common sense—of which you possess an inexhaustible fund—comes to your rescue. Each time you succeed in avoiding making a fool of yourself, develops the power of resistance.

Life holds many prizes in store for you, and all those that you win you will have earned. Emotional, without being sentimental, your passions are strong. Your love, when it finally centers on one, will be lasting and constant. When you do make a home, it will be a haven of rest and comfort for its occupants.

Successful people born December 29:

1. John McDonough, founder of McDonough Institute, Maryland.
2. John C. B. Davis, United States Minister to Germany.
3. George H. Smillie, artist.
4. John Vance Cheney, poet and librarian.
5. Gladstone, "England's Grand Old Man."
6. Queen Elizabeth of Roumania ("Carmen Sylva").

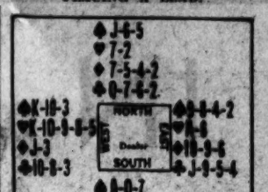
WORK ON BRIDGE

PLACING A LEAD.



With the above hand at Contract, South would bid three No Trumps and obtain the contract.

The hand was played in an Auction Bridge tournament some years ago and at most of the tables South failed to make game playing one No Trump. The play at all tables was the same—and correct—up to and including the ninth trick.

West made the approved lead from King-Ten-Nine—the Ten, which would be correct also from Ace-Ten-Nine. East won with the Ace and returned the suit. South playing one of his honors to force out the command. West took the second trick with the King of Hearts and led the Nine to the third trick. South winning with his other honor. South then led four rounds of Diamonds and next the Ace and King of Clubs, giving him a total of seven tricks. He needed two more to make game and determined that the best way was to lead the Ace of Spades and then a small Spade. If East won with the King of Spades (an even chance), he would have to lead either a Spade or a Club and in that event Declarer would make game, but it so happened that the even chance swung the other way. West won with the King of Spades and ran his two good Hearts, saving game by taking these three tricks in addition to the two won by his side at the start.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

At the tables at which the hand was played correctly, the Declarer, when leading to trick 10, saw that after running his Diamonds and the Ace and King of Clubs, his safe play was to lead a Heart and allow West to make two more Hearts—a total of four tricks. West then would have to lead a Spade or a Club and in either event Declarer would take tricks 12 and 13, which would ensure game.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

BEGONIAS FOR WINTER WINDOW GARDENS.

WHILE I feel that the begonia has had it full share of attention in this column this last few weeks, I am tempted to speak again of this plant, even though I may be repeating information that has been covered before. Every day I receive letters asking me why the leaves of a begonia suddenly drop or why the main stem of an otherwise healthy plant begins to decay.

To begin at the beginning, you must understand that there are two distinct types of begonias, those with fibrous roots and a second class with tuberous roots. The second class must be kept growing continuously. The second requires a rest period of several months each year.

The begonias usually found growing in the house in winter all belong to the fibrous-rooted varieties. They are in most cases rex, or what is known as ornamental-leafed, flowering varieties. Perhaps the most popular begonia we have for house culture is the Glorie de Lorraine. This variety is literally covered with pink blossoms. The plant, while beautiful, is really not able to combat conditions in the modern house as is the Glorie de Cincinnata; so if you are going to purchase a new plant, let me suggest that you ask for a Cincinnata variety or a Begonia Mellior. Any begonia is easy of culture, provided you give it a warm place in which to be happy.

I think a temperature of 60 degrees at night and a little more than 65 degrees during the day will suit it. You know it is said that a begonia will thrive any place where a geranium will live. While the begonia will stand some sun, it does better, on the whole, if it is kept in a place where it is not exposed to full sun.

Begonias also resent a sudden change of temperature. This is frequently the reason why a healthy plant loses its foliage. Another essential to the successful culture of any member of this large family of plants is drainage.

While the Rex varieties demand plenty of water, the other varieties do not. In fact, I think it is safer to keep them too dry than too wet. As all begonias make their most active growth in the spring, it is better to wait until March to repot them.

Always when watering any begonia be careful that the moisture does not collect on the foliage or about the main stem of the plant. Never apply water when the sun is shining directly on the plant.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

KEEPING WITHIN THE BUDGET.

THE younger wives are having a terrible time trying to adjust the family budget during this stressful period of curdled finance. One of them today is ready to give up. "We never have the same income three weeks in succession, it seems." Well, that is true of thousands of homes. Men who are remunerated on a commission basis seldom know one month in advance, what their income will be any given week. But that does not worry the wives of such men. It is just a matter of becoming used to that form of existence. One of our very dearest friends always assures that if she were a writer she would feel as if she were living on "stage money." No salary? "Terrible." What if some wives had no ideas? And most married women feel the same toward unmarried women who make their own living. No husband? Terrible. What if you lost your job? Everything in life is a matter of habit. If you form the habit of selling ideas for a living, you find yourself with ideas on hand. If you form the habit of holding down a job to support yourself, you find yourself able to hold down a job. And if you have a fluctuating income and form the habit of adjusting your expenditures to meet it, you find yourself able to do so quite casually.

For the benefit of all such wives we offer Nina's little wail. It does not mean a thing, except that Nina is young and inexperienced. If her story is your story just make the best of things until habit takes charge. Learn to strike an average—with the aid of friend Hubby. Then keep well within the average.

"I am so disgusted with marriage. It just makes me sick. It is four months now and honestly we never have the same income three weeks in succession, it seems. No matter how I figure I am always wrong. When we married he told me he was getting $60 a week. He was at that time. But there have been weeks since when we have not had $30. Then a couple of weeks $60 again. We pay $65 rent. It is too much, but he says not if we are a "little careful." That is a slam at me. He eats out a lot as he is a salesman, but our dinners are always costly and I can not seem to help it. A small roast is over a dollar, and vegetables, and desserts. Weeks when we have only $30 we can put nothing by for the rent at all. At present we have bills of nearly $100. I can not go on living like this. On $60 I could keep house, but on $60 one week and nothing the next I certainly can not. I want to move, or go home to live, or something. I can't be trying to figure out each miserable dollar. I am tired of talking and thinking money. I would just as soon give up and call the whole thing off. What do you think I should do? NINA.

And of course we think Nina should play the game. She is right in feeling that the rent is higher than her budget allows, but evidently the frequent slumps in commissions are not alarming to her husband who perhaps knows that the season or temporary condition account for this and that the law of averages will take up the slack in the coming weeks. If he feels secure there is no reason why Nina should not. It is up to a wife to learn her end of the business just as the man learns his. The salesman husband knows when to call on a prospect and just how much to sell him. The wife should know just what day to have a roast and how big a one to have.

A life without any problems to be solved would be a most uninteresting one. Fortunately for themselves, all young wives have plenty of problems to solve. Nina's is to know how to average up an income that runs from $65 a week to $30 a week with more $60 weeks than $30 ones. Thought will do it. Fussing never will.

A flock of 300 hens in Knox County, Tenn., laid 32,942 eggs in a year, which brought $1,285.25. Feeding costs were $539.05.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TREATING BURNS.

DR. FREDERICK CHRISTOPHER, the author of a widely used book on minor surgery, is strongly in favor of the tannic acid treatment of burns. All first-aid cabinets should contain bottles of tannic acid powder, plainly marked both with the name of the chemical and the amount to be added to a pint of water to make a 5 per cent solution. Incidentally, this is 384 grains. The amount required to make an ounce of the solution is 24 grains.

The solution should be used when fresh. The surface of a severe burn is to be sprayed with this solution every fifteen minutes until the surface has some resemblance to a piece of leather. It is then left without further treatment except it be a simple dressing to keep insects away and to protect the wound against knocks and rubs. If no spray is available the solution can be painted on with a brush or with cotton or applied on gauze. If no tannic acid is available Shen uses tea for the same purpose. Eight parts of good tea leaves is steeped in 100 parts of water for fifteen minutes and it is finally brought to a boil. This makes a dark red tea with a bitter taste. This is applied by either of the methods used with the tannic acid solution.

Treat pain with morphine.

Remove clothing carefully.

Do not apply any ointments to the burned surface. If they be present trim the wound and use different fluids in various ways—simple water, salt solutions or sugar solutions.

The advice against sterile ointments applies to burns to be treated by tannic acid. It does not apply to simple, shallow burns.

He tells us that in an experience with several hundred severely burned children the tannic acid treatment reduced the death rate by more than one-half. In fact certain factors were reduced by more than two-thirds.

TREATING KIDNEY STONES.

L. D. S. writes: Can one take any medicine and thereby dissolve kidney stones?

REPLY.

No.

In a given case the pain may disappear because of the passage of the stones, or because they have become fixed and immobile.

MILK AS AID TO FAT.

REPLY.

It should help, particularly if one also eats enough starchy or sweet foods and if the cards are otherwise stacked for health.

ICHTHYOSIS.

I. I. writes:

1. What is ichthyosis? How is it contracted? Is it a parasite?

2. Can it be cured? How long does it take? Is there danger of a relapse?

3. Is it contagious? If so, what precautions are necessary? Is it hereditary?

REPLY.

1. The common name is fish skin. Nobody knows how it is contracted. It is not due to a parasite.

2. Treatment is unsatisfactory.

3. It is neither.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

For several months there was a strong suspicion amounting almost to a belief, that the public didn't like to listen to musical pictures, or even to pictures with music in them, and that to make them was very foolish.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT

One can hardly blame the producers for refusing to give up without a fight after spending millions trying to put over an idea.

But now Hollywood is convinced that filmusicals aren't entertainment because in the last few months they all have flopped, violently, right into the red, and good and deep, too.

Programs for the coming year show the pendulum has swung the other direction, as far away from the early 1930 musical trend as possible.

Song Writers Leave.

Song writers, who began their descent on the town after the success of "The Broadway Melody," and had their day, have retired to their native habitat. A few optimists remain, but it may be the climate that's keeping them.

First National and Warner Bros., the two that went in for music on the biggest scale, are almost noteless.

The change in these jointly operated plants is indicative of what has happened in other studios! Their nearly 200 lyric writers and assistant composers have dwindled down to a single arranger.

There are many instances such as these!

Two complete scores written by the famous Oscar Straus, one for Warners and one for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, may never get near a sound track.

The Kern-Harbach and Romberg-Hammerstein teams still hold contracts to write more picture music, but unless conditions change, they likely will get their money without even penning a note.

Some Music Left.

Certainly there will be more music and singing because an occasional earful of Lawrence Tibbett or Maurice Chevalier is good for every one's movie diet. But singing will be kept to a minimum.

The inability of established stars to hit the high C's isn't worrying them now any more than their ignorance of the Eskimo language or of sword swallowing.

Roast Pork and Sweet Potatoes.

Loin of pork, 5 pounds.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
¼ teaspoon celery salt.
3 tablespoons flour.
1 cup water.
8 sweet potatoes, peeled.
½ teaspoon salt.

Wipe pork with damp cloth. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon of salt, paprika, celery salt and flour. Set in baking pan. Add the water and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven. Cover and lower the fire and bake 1½ hours in a moderately slow oven. Baste frequently. Add the potatoes and sprinkle them with ½ teaspoon of salt. Bake 50 minutes. Baste frequently. Place roast on large serving platter. Surround with sweet potatoes and apple rings.

Apple Rings.

4 large red apples.
1 cup sugar,
1 cup water.
8 red cinnamon candies.

Wash and core apples. Do not peel them. Cut in slices two-thirds inch thick, cutting crossways. Boil the sugar, water and cinnamon candies 3 minutes. Add apple rings and bake 30 minutes. Turn apples during baking so they will cook evenly. Cooking the apples at the same time as the roast saves fuel.

Turnips Au Gratin.

3 cups diced, cooked turnips.
4 tablespoons butter.
6 tablespoons flour.
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
½ cup cheese, cut fine.
2-3 cup crumbs.
2 tablespoons butter, melted.

Melt 4 tablespoons of butter and add the flour, salt and paprika. Add the milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Add the cheese and stir until it has melted. Add the turnips and pour into a shallow, buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with the crumbs which have been mixed with the 2 tablespoons of melted butter. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Genius in Youth.

Billy, age 13, rates so high on psychological tests that he falls into the group of exceptionally gifted children.

His class work has always been excellent, but occasionally his conduct has left something to be desired. His teachers in the past have been sympathetic and understanding.

This year, however, he immediately began getting into difficulties and it was not long before his mother was called in to confer with the new teacher.

As Billy's mother walked into the room the teacher drew herself up and said, "So you're Billy's mother, and I suppose you have been told he is a genius. Well, let me tell you he has a lot of things to learn, no matter how smart he is, or I won't keep him in my class." It developed then that Billy was objectionable because his hands were dirty, his hair uncombed and his clothes untidy.

The teacher's opening sentence gave her away. As the interview went on it became increasingly clear that her real objection to Billy had nothing to do with his appearance. Billy, it seemed, had an inconvenient way of asking perfectly sincere questions which she was unable to answer. He also annoyed her by demanding reasons, by working out problems in his own way and by questioning certain statements in his history book.

Perhaps one of the most important qualifications a teacher should have is the ability to accept without loss of poise the fact that she may have under tutelage a child who is almost as intelligent as she is. A teacher who is jealous of such intelligence and who feels inferior before it may well do him incalculable harm.

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "Plunket" (also spelled "Plunkett" and "Plunkitt") has come down to us from several sources. It is sometimes a variation of the French "Plonquette" or "Planquette" the full significance of which is "he who lives near the plankbridge." There is a village called "La Planquette" in Normandy, and it is probable that many families called "Plunkett" have received the name because of a former residence in that place. Sometimes "Plunket" has come into English, through the French, from the Latin adjective "plancus" meaning "flat-footed." In such cases it was obviously first given as a nickname. Frequently it is a nickname or tradename taken from the cloth called "plunket," "plonket" or "plonkette" in middle English. This was a coarse white woolen cloth which was much used in early days. Its Anglo-French form was "blanket," a word which is now in common use in the English language to designate coverings for beds, &c. Its old French form is "blanchet" and its ultimate source is the old high German "blanch" meaning "white." The history of language shows, as in the case of "plunket" and "blanket," that it is not unusual for a kind of cloth to assume the name of the color in which it is generally made. Finally, "Plunket" has frequently become confused with "Fluskett." "Fluckneti" is an Anglicised form of the French "Fluquhet," which means "shaggy," and which was obviously first given as a nickname. A certain Jocelus de Plunkenet and a William de Plukenet are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls.

The family name "Herburg" is a modern form of the Germanic personal name "Heriburg" which may be translated "warrior-protection" or "army-protection."

Prize Butter A Test of Food Stores

Test a food store by the butter it sells and you won't go far wrong. The butter you can judge in several ways. The sure way is by the verdicts of the butter makers' own jury. These verdicts are rendered at the butter makers' conventions, state and national.

At the Iowa convention in Waterloo four butter makers took first and second prizes among 217 entries in the senior and junior contests. Their butter is to be found only in A&P stores.

The National Convention in Minneapolis gave its highest prize—the grand sweepstakes—to W. F. Wargowsky, manager of the Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Company in Boyden, Iowa. Butter makers from all over the country competed in this contest. The blue ribbon butter of the year has been sold exclusively for many years in A&P stores.

In A&P the best butter makers are sure of a steady customer for their product. Among the food in its stores their butter is sure to find itself in good company.

Neuritis!

There is no pain like Neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. Renew your hope—learn how Nature can help you. Phone for our booklet today. Met. 1062.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE office of Warden Robert Barr, in the Tombs, New York's historic city prison, will become a broadcasting studio on New Year's afternoon. Desks, chairs and fixtures will be summarily removed, and blankets from cell bunks, hastily draped along the walls, will become the acoustical adjuncts of a thirty-minute radio program by the Inmates Band of the New York State Reformatory on Hart's Island (WEAF network, 2:30 p. m.)

The inmates will go to New York from Hart's Island especially for the broadcast and will eat their New Year's dinner in the Tombs before making the radio debut. Studio attendants will be guards, stationed at the doors of the warden's office.

Beginning this morning, Gene and Glenn, well-known to WTAM, Cleveland, listeners, will replace Phil Cook in his 8 o'clock period. Cook will continue his evening broadcast (WRC, 7:30 o'clock). Gene and Glenn will introduce Washington listeners to their two famous characters "Jake and Lena," during this period.

If Mussolini's voice is received clearly in the United States, short wave transmitters at WGY, Schenectady, KDKA, Pittsburgh, and KGO, San Francisco, will endeavor to boost it around the rest of the world.

THE newest of radio instruments was a special feature of a concert given by the Philadelphia Orchestra. The French name for it is "onde musical." The manner of playing it seems to be pretty much the same as the Theremin, which apparently is operated by waving the hands over it in the air.

In the lower notes the new instrument sounds like a cello, in the middle range like a saxophone, and in the upper register like a flute.

No amount of trouble, apparently, can deter a radio fan who wants to see his favorite performer. Henry Burbig was host to a crippled boy recently. The boy traveled two hours from his home in Staten Island, despite the fact that he was unable to rise from the wheel chair in which he came into the studio.

Tony Cabooch, One-Man Radio Show, will make some pre-mature "New Year's Revolutions" tonight over WABC at 7:45 o'clock.

Mrs. Norman Ogden Whitehouse, former Princess Tamara Bagration of Russia, will "pour" at the radio tea tomorrow afternoon (WRC, 5 o'clock)

Ezra Meeker's 100th anniversary will be celebrated tonight. The speakers will be the Secretary of the Interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur, and Miss Afine Morgan (WRC, 10:30 o'clock).

ANOTHER broadside against an talk injected into radio pro- excessive amount of advertising grams has been delivered by Dr. Lee De Forest.

"It is worse on the West Coast than in the East," he said. "One of the largest manufacturers of vacuum tubes told me that this year their business will not be more than $7,000,000. Last year it totaled net $27,000,000.

"I attribute much of the current slump not to the general business depression, but to the fact that the public are not using radio sets as much. They are tired of all the sales talk."

Recently a New York announcer was forced to cut his time for dinner to half an hour in order to hurry back to the station and announce that "The next program comes from Chicago, Ill." After that he had nothing more to do for an hour.

Speaking from London, Lord Snakey broadcast his views on India. Wouldn't that give you the creeps?

Jane Corbett INTERPRETS the MODE

Paris, Dec. 28.

O-O-O-OH, the joys of being a lovely lady in these hectic times when everything is done to enhance our beauty and our romantic glamour!

And about the most glamorous, and certainly the quaintest aid we have this year is gloves! Especially evening gloves. Some of the new ones I have seen are of enchanting black Chantilly lace, fingerless like grandmamma's mitts, and extending from just below the thumb to halfway up the upper arm. There they have a frill, and under this frill is a band of narrow silk elastic which keeps them in place.

Some couturiers have elaborated on this theme. They make the same fingerless gloves, but of white or eggshell lace, and add two or three frills at the top. And in keeping with the importance of jeweled brilliance this season, one house outlines the design in a two-inch border in palest mauve sequins! And gives milady a huge matching lace-and-sequin hankie to carry.

For the more mature woman very long black suede and glace kid gloves are being worn with black, white or delicately colored evening gowns. I have seen many of these gloves embroidered in rhinestones, and one delightful pair, plain black suede, had a diamond monogram on the left wrist. These were worn by a stately white-haired lady in the plainest of white velvet evening gowns. And few of the dancers there received more approving glances than she!

• • • •

Every inch of this warmly glowing red-orange crepe marocain dress spells the utmost in chic! From its odd, high collar of mink to its jagged hemline it is entirely charming. And one of the reasons I sketched it for you today is to show what delightful things Martial et Armand did with a diagonal peplum. Its just the gayest, cheerfulest little frock—one of those that's ready to laugh its way through just about any informal occasion!

• • • •

You're in for a mighty pleasant surprise if you rush your stamped, self-addressed envelope off to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet! For we have solved a problem that is close to every Lovely Lady's heart—how to afford a really lovely and expensive evening gown for just one particular party! The whole secret is that we explain how to transform it into a beautiful and graceful afternoon frock with very little additional work, and absolutely no more material than is used for its evening self, which is four yards. Think of it!

O-o-oh, what a chic hat is this, with cut felt plaques for trimming across the back of the neck! And how clever the necklace of the same felt plaques!

• • • •

Are you reading Dare's weekly fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post? If you're not, you should.

Au Revoir!

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF December 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:15 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

The astrological portents of December 29 indicate a time of bustle and activity, as well as many unexpected changes. Some of these changes will inure to your benefit; others to your disadvantage. After sunset, more settled conditions will prevail.

A child born on this December 29 will be popular at school, and the adulation that it will receive will not spoil, but inspire it. No brilliant achievement can be prognosticated, but it will go through life enjoying the affectionate regard of its fellows.

You, if born on December 29, possess great ambition, as well as the ability and perseverance to gratify it, if you do not allow yourself to be diverted by pleasure-loving procilivities to neglect it. You are endowed with more than ordinary intelligence. You have vision. You are as keen as mustard, and with it all, your personality, although compelling, is pleasing. You always secure your ends by diplomacy and persuasion, never by forceful measures. Your smile wins, when a frown would lose.

You find it hard at times to tread "the straight and narrow." Of a congenial disposition, you experience difficulty in resisting the blandishments of those who would entice you from your self-chosen field of endeavor. As a rule, your common sense—of which you possess an inexhaustible fund—comes to your rescue. Each time you succeed in avoiding making a fool of yourself, develops the power of resistance.

Life holds many prizes in store for you, and all those that you win you will have earned. Emotional, without being sentimental, your passions are strong. Your love, when it finally centers on one, will be lasting and constant. When you do make a home, it will be a haven of rest and comfort for its occupants.

Successful people born December 29:

1. John McDonough, founder of McDonough Institute, Maryland.
2. John C. B. Davis, United States Minister to Germany.
3. George H. Smillie, artist.
4. John Vance Cheney, poet and librarian.
5. Gladstone, "England's Grand Old Man."
6. Queen Elizabeth of Roumania ("Carmen Sylva").

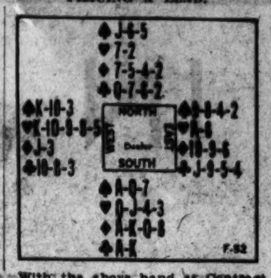
PLACING A LEAD.



With the above hand at Contract, South would bid three No Trumps and obtain the contract.

The hand was played in an Auction Bridge tournament some years ago and at most of the tables South failed to make game playing one No Trump. The play at all tables was the same—and correct—up to and including the ninth trick.

West made the approved lead from King-Ten-Nine—the Ten, which would be correct also from Ace-Ten-Nine. East won with the Ace and returned the suit. South playing one of his honors to force out the command. West took the second trick with the King of Hearts and led the Nine to the third trick. South winning with his other honor. South then led four rounds of Diamonds and next the Ace and King of Clubs, giving him a total of seven tricks. He needed two more to make game and determined that the best way was to lead the Ace of Spades and then a small Spade. If East won with the King of Spades (an even chance), he would have to lead either a Spade or a Club and in that event Declarer would make game, but it so happened that the even chance swung the other way. West won with the King of Spades and ran his two good Hearts, saving game by taking these three tricks in addition to the two won by his side at the start.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

At the tables at which the hand was played correctly, the Declarer, when leading to trick 10, saw that after running his Diamonds and the Ace and King of Clubs, his safe play was to lead a Heart and allow West to make two more Hearts—a total of four tricks. West then would have to lead a Spade or a Club and in either event Declarer would take tricks 12 and 13, which would ensure game.

BEGONIAS FOR WINTER WINDOW GARDENS.

WHILE I feel that the begonia has had it full share of attention in this column this last few weeks, I am tempted to speak again of this plant, even though I may be repeating information that has been covered before. Every day I receive letters asking me why the leaves of a begonia suddenly drop or why the main stem of an otherwise healthy plant begins to decay.

To begin at the beginning, you must understand that there are two distinct types of begonias, those with fibrous roots and a second class with tuberous roots. The second class must be kept growing continuously. The second requires a rest period of several months each year.

The begonias usually found growing in the house in winter all belong to the fibrous-rooted varieties. They are in most cases rex, or what is known as ornamental-leafed, flowering varieties. Perhaps the most popular begonia we have for house culture is the Glorie de Lorraine. This variety is literally covered with pink blossoms. The plant, while beautiful, is really not able to combat conditions in the modern house as is the Glorie de Cincinnata; so if you are going to purchase a new plant, let me suggest that you ask for a Cincinnata variety or a Begonia Mellior. Any begonia is easy of culture, provided you give it a warm place in which to be happy.

I think a temperature of 60 degrees at night and a little more than 65 degrees during the day will suit it. You know it is said that a begonia will thrive any place where a geranium will live. While the begonia will stand some sun, it does better, on the whole, if it is kept in a place where it is not exposed to full sun.

Begonias also resent a sudden change of temperature. This is frequently the reason why a healthy plant loses its foliage. Another essential to the successful culture of any member of this large family of plants is drainage.

While the Rex varieties demand plenty of water, the other varieties do not. In fact, I think it is safer to keep them too dry than too wet. As all begonias make their most active growth in the spring, it is better to wait until March to repet them.

Always when watering any begonia be careful that the moisture does not collect on the foliage or about the main stem of the plant. Never apply water when the sun is shining directly on the plant.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

KEEPING WITHIN THE BUDGET.

THE younger wives are having a terrible time trying to adjust the family budget during this stressful period of curdled finance. One of them today is ready to give up. "We never have the same income three weeks in succession, it seems." Well, that is true of thousands of homes. Men who are remunerated on a commission basis seldom know one month in advance, what their income will be any given week. But that does not worry the wives of such men. It is just a matter of becoming used to that form of existence. One of our very dearest friends always assures that if she were a writer she would feel as if she were living on "stage money." No salary? Terrible. What if some week you had no ideas? And most married women feel the same toward unmarried women who make their own living. No husband? Terrible. What if you lost your job? Everything in life is a matter of habit. If you form the habit of selling ideas for a living, you find yourself with ideas on hand. If you form the habit of holding down a job to support yourself, you find yourself able to hold down a job. And if you have a fluctuating income and form the habit of adjusting your expenditures to meet it, you find yourself able to do so quite casually.

For the benefit of all such wives we offer Nina's little wail. It does not mean a thing, except that Nina is young and inexperienced. If her story is your story just make the best of things until habit takes charge. Learn to strike an average—with the aid of friend Hubby. Then keep well within the average.

"I am so disgusted with marriage. It just makes me sick. It is four months now and honestly we never have the same income three weeks in succession, it seems. No matter how I figure I am always wrong. When we married he told me he was getting $60 a week. He was at that time. But there have been weeks since when we have not had $30. Then a couple of weeks $60 again. We pay $65 rent. It is too much, but he says not if we are a "little careful." That is a slam at me. He eats out a lot as he is a salesman, but our dinners are always costly and I can not seem to help it. A small roast is over a dollar, and vegetables, and desserts. Weeks when we have only $30 we can put nothing by for the rent at all. At present we have bills of nearly $100. I can not go on living like this. On $60 I could keep house, but on $60 one week and nothing the next I certainly can not. I want to move, or go home to live, or something. I can't be trying to figure out each miserable dollar. I am tired of talking and thinking money. I would just as soon give up and call the whole thing off. What do you think I should do? NINA.

And of course we think Nina should play the game. She is right in feeling that the rent is higher than her budget allows, but evidently the frequent slumps in commissions are not alarming to her husband who perhaps knows that the season or temporary condition account for this and that the law of averages will take up the slack in the coming weeks. If he feels secure there is no reason why Nina should not. It is up to a wife to learn her end of the business just as the man learns his. The salesman husband knows when to call on a prospect and just how much to sell him. The wife should know just what day to have a roast and how big a one to have.

A life without any problems to be solved would be a most uninteresting one. Fortunately for themselves, all young wives have plenty of problems to solve. Nina's is to know how to average up an income that runs from $60 a week to $30 a week with more $60 weeks than $30 ones. Thought will do it. Pussing never will.

A flock of 300 hens in Knox County, Tenn., laid 32,942 eggs in a year, which brought $1,285.25. Feeding costs were $390.05.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TREATING BURNS.

DR. FREDERICK CHRISTOPHER, the author of a widely used book on minor surgery, is strongly in favor of the tannic acid treatment of burns. All first-aid cabinets should contain bottles of tannic acid powder, plainly marked both with the name of the chemical and the amount to be added to a pint of water to make a 5 per cent solution. Incidentally, this is 384 grains. The amount required to make an ounce of the solution is 24 grains.

The solution should be used when fresh. The surface of a severe burn is to be sprayed with this solution every fifteen minutes until the surface has some resemblance to a piece of leather. It is then left without further treatment except it be a simple dressing to keep insects away and to protect the wound against knocks and rubs. If no spray is available the solution can be painted on with a brush or with cotton of applied on gauze. If no tannic acid is available Shen uses tea for the same purpose. Eight parts of good tea leaves is steeped in 100 parts of water for fifteen minutes and it is finally brought to a boil. This makes a dark red tea with a bitter taste. This is applied by either of the methods used with the tannic acid solution.

Treat pain with morphine.

Remove clothing carefully.

Do not apply any ointments to the burned surface. If they be present remove them.

Place the badly burned patient in a heated tent and without clothing.

Use tannic acid treatment.

When the physician arrives he may trim the wound and use different fluids in various ways—simple water, salt solutions or sugar solutions.

The advice against sterile ointments applies to burns to be treated by tannic acid. It does not apply to simple, shallow burns.

He tells us that in an experience with several hundred severely burned children the tannic acid treatment reduced the death rate by more than one-half. In fact certain factors were reduced by more than two-thirds.

TREATING KIDNEY STONES.

L. D. S. writes: Can one take any medicine and thereby dissolve kidney stones?

REPLY.

No.

In a given case the pain may disappear because of the passage of the stones, or because they have become fixed and immobile.

MILK AS AID TO FAT.

REPLY.

It should help, particularly if one also eats enough starchy or sweet foods and if the cards are otherwise stacked for health.

ICHTHYOSIS.

I. I. writes:

1. What is ichthyosis? How is it contracted? Is it a parasite?
2. Can it be cured? How long does it take? Is there danger of a relapse?
3. Is it contagious? If so, what precautions are necessary? Is it hereditary?

REPLY.

1. The common name is fish skin. Nobody knows how it is contracted. It is not due to a parasite.
2. Treatment is unsatisfactory.
3. It is neither.

Hollywood Screen Life

By MURRARD REAVY.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT

For several months there was a strong suspicion amounting almost to a belief, that the public didn't like to listen to musical pictures, or even to pictures with music in them, and that to make them was very foolish.

One can hardly blame the producers for refusing to give up without a fight after spending millions trying to put over an idea.

But now Hollywood is convinced that filmusicals aren't entertainment because in the last few months they all have flopped, violently, right into the red, and good and deep, too.

Programs for the coming year show the pendulum has swung the other direction, as far away from the early 1930 musical trend as possible.

Song Writers Leave.

Song writers, who began their descent on the town after the success of "The Broadway Melody," and had their day, have retired to their native habitat. A few optimists remain, but it may be the climate that's keeping them.

First National and Warner Bros., the two that went in for music on the biggest scale, are almost noteless.

The change in these jointly operated plants is indicative of what has happened in other studios! Their nearly 200 lyric writers and assistant composers have dwindled down to a single arranger.

There are many instances such as these:

Two complete scores written by the famous Oscar Strauss, one for Warners and one for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, may never get near a sound track.

The Kern-Harbach and Romberg-Hammerstein teams still hold contracts to write more picture music, but unless conditions change, they likely will get their money without even penning a note.

Certainly there will be more music and singing because an occasional earful of Lawrence Tibbett or Maurice Chevalier is good for every one's movie diet. But singing will be kept to a minimum.

The inability of established stars to hit the high C's isn't worrying them now any more than their ignorance of the Eskimo language or of sword swallowing.

What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "Plunket" (also spelled "Plunkett" and "Plunkitt") has come down to us from several sources. It is sometimes a variation of the French "Plonquette" or "Planquette" the full significance of which is "he who lives near the plankbridge." There is a village called "La Planquette" in Normandy, and it is probable that many families called "Plunkett" have received the name because of a former residence in that place. Sometimes "Plunket" has come into English, through the French, from the Latin adjective "plancus" meaning "flat-footed." In such cases it was obviously first given as a nickname. Frequently it is a nickname or tradename taken from the cloth called "plunket," "plonket" or "plonkette" in middle English. This was a coarse white woolen cloth which was much used in early days. Its Anglo-French form was "blanket," a word which is now in common use in the English language to designate coverings for beds, &c. Its old French form is "blanchet" and its ultimate source is the old high German "blanch" meaning "white." The history of language shows, as in the case of "plunket" and "blanket," that it is not unusual for a kind of cloth to assume the name of the color in which it is generally made. Finally, "Plunket" has frequently become confused with "Plucknett." "Plucknett" is an Anglicised form of the French "Pluquinet," which means "shaggy," and which was obviously first given as a nickname. A certain Jocelus de Plunkenet and a William de Plukenet are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls.

The family name "Herburg" is a modern form of the Germanic personal name "Heriburg" which may be translated "warrior-protection" or "army-protection."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Genius in Youth.

Billy, age 13, rates so high on psychological tests that he falls into the group of exceptionally gifted children.

His class work has always been excellent, but occasionally his conduct has left something to be desired. His teachers in the past have been sympathetic and understanding.

This year, however, he immediately began getting into difficulties and it was not long before his mother was called in to confer with the new teacher.

As Billy's mother walked into the room the teacher drew herself up and said, "So you're Billy's mother, and I suppose you have been told he is a genius. Well, let me tell you he has a lot of things to learn, no matter how smart he is, or I won't keep him in my class." It developed then that Billy was objectionable because his hands were dirty, his hair uncombed and his clothes untidy.

The teacher's opening sentence gave her away. As the interview went on it became increasingly clear that her real objection to Billy had nothing to do with his appearance. Billy, it seemed, had an inconvenient way of asking perfectly sincere questions which she was unable to answer. He also annoyed her by demanding reasons, by working out problems in his own way and by questioning certain statements in his history book.

Perhaps one of the most important qualifications a teacher should have is the ability to accept without loss of poise the fact that she may have under tutelage a child who is almost as intelligent as she is. A teacher who is jealous of such intelligence and who feels inferior before it may well do him incalculable harm.

Roast Pork and Sweet Potatoes:

Loin of pork, 5 pounds.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
¼ teaspoon celery salt.
3 tablespoons flour.
1 cup water.
8 sweet potatoes, peeled.
½ teaspoon salt.

Wipe pork with damp cloth. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon of salt, paprika, celery salt and flour. Set in baking pan. Add the water and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven. Cover and lower the fire and bake 1½ hours in a moderately slow oven. Baste frequently. Add the potatoes and sprinkle them with ½ teaspoon of salt. Bake 50 minutes. Baste frequently. Place roast on large serving platter. Surround with sweet potatoes and apple rings.

Apple Rings.

4 large red apples.
1 cup sugar,
1 cup water.
8 red cinnamon candies.

Wash and core apples. Do not peel them. Cut in slices two-thirds inch thick, cutting crossways. Boil the sugar, water and cinnamon candies 3 minutes. Add apple rings and bake 30 minutes. Turn apples during baking so they will cook evenly. Cooking the apples at the same time as the roast saves fuel.

Turnips Au Gratin.

3 cups diced, cooked turnips.
4 tablespoons butter.
6 tablespoons flour.
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
½ cup cheese, cut fine.
2-3 cup crumbs,
2 tablespoons butter, melted.

Melt 4 tablespoons of butter and add the flour, salt and paprika. Add the milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Add the cheese and stir until it has melted. Add the turnips and pour into a shallow, buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with the crumbs which have been mixed with the 2 tablespoons of melted butter. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Prize Butter
A Test of Food Stores

Test a food store by the butter it sells and you won't go far wrong. The butter you can judge in several ways. The sure way is by the verdicts of the butter makers' own jury. These verdicts are rendered at the butter makers' conventions, state and national.

At the Iowa convention in Waterloo four butter makers took first and second prizes among 217 entries in the senior and junior contests. Their butter is to be found only in A&P stores.

The National Convention in Minneapolis gave its highest prize—the grand sweepstakes—to W. F. Wargowsky, manager of the Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Company in Boyden, Iowa. Butter makers from all over the country competed in this contest. The blue ribbon butter of the year has been sold exclusively for many years in A&P stores.

In A&P the best butter makers are sure of a steady customer for their product. Among the food in its stores their butter is sure to find itself in good company.

Neuritis!

There is no pain like Neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. Renew your hope—learn how Nature can help you. Phone for our booklet today. Met. 1962.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Capital Plans Private Fetes For New Year

Chevy Chase Club Will Be Favorite Rendezvous for Younger Set.

"WHERE are you going New Year's Eve?" This question is being echoed about among members of the older and younger set with the approach of that night of celebration, when some form resolutions to withstand the dawn of another day, and others look upon it as the grand finale of the holiday season. In any case, it will be the most strenuous evening of the season, people "milling" here and there to homes, clubs and hotels in gay parties.

With the exception of one or two small fetes in Washington, it appears that the celebration this year will be staged in a highly disconnected fashion.

The Chevy Chase Club will again be the favorite rendezvous of members of the younger set and their beaux, who wouldn't miss seeing the dawn of a new year there for the world. In an effort to avoid too much of a mob scene, the board of the club several seasons ago passed a rule to restrict the number of guests for that evening. This came as the result of a New Year's Eve celebration there two years ago.

Others will say "out with the old, and in with the new" at the various hotels, where special entertainment features are to be offered, and a number of people, after spending the best part of the holiday season in Washington, will go to New York to celebrate.

To date the only private parties which have been announced for New Year's Eve are those to be given by the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Davila, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benning Spencer. The Davilas are giving a small supper dance, and the Spencers have also invited a small company for supper and dancing afterward.

One party will in no way interfere with the other, for the Davilas' guests will include for the most part, members of the Latin-American diplomatic missions in Washington, while the Spencers will have the "Dancing Class" set, although a few people will probably "take in" both fetes.

Miss Doherty Honored At Buffet Supper.

Miss Helen Lee Eames Doherty is the guest in whose honor Mr. Waverly Taylor entertained a company of young people at a buffet supper last evening at the Dower House.

Word from London brings news of the approaching marriage of Mrs. Laura Kayser Bayer to Count Antoine de Sala, who formerly served in Washington as a member of the staff at the French Embassy. The wedding will take place in London in January.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Perry West entertained a large party at dinner on Saturday evening complimentary to Miss Rosalind Deakyne, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Herbert Deakyne, who made her debut on Saturday afternoon at a tea dance at the Officers Club at the Army War College. The party later went to the Club Chantecler for dancing.

The guests included Miss Mary Ranck, of Lancaster, Pa.; Miss Jane Kerrigan, of Boston; Miss Mildred Clark, Miss Constance Ralston, Miss Elizabeth Asher, Miss Elizabeth Ulman and the three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. West, Miss Helen Gallilher West, Miss Ruth Allston West and Miss Mary Elizabeth West; Lieut. Cadet Cron will be graduated from the United States Military Academy in June.

Mrs. Adam Wyant will entertain a company of 25 at luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel today for her debutante daughter, Miss Anne Moore Wyant and for Miss Kathleen Knox. Miss Wyant is home from Smith College for the holidays.

Dr. W. Hayes Yeager, professor of oratory, George Washington University, and Mrs. Yeager have taken possession of their new home, 1604 Forty-fourth street, Foxhall Village.

On New Year's Day from 4 to 6 o'clock the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women will give a reception in the Stoneleigh Court Studio. No formal invitations have been issued. The president, Mrs. Estelle M. Moses, will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Ida Donnally Peters, Miss Jean Stephenson, Mrs. W. W. Badgeley, Mrs. Dawson Olmstead and other members of her executive board. A feature will be the exhibit of oils, water colors and bas-reliefs, the work of Margaret Scully Zimmele, which will remain in the studio until January 11.

Executives of the Federal Farm Loan Board and their wives will meet this evening at the dinner to be given by Commissioner L. J. Pettijohn and Mrs. Pettijohn at the Shoreham Hotel in compliment to their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Denious, of Dobbs City, Kans.

WASHINGTON: MONDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1930. 11

BARE 1,500 SEES SOUTH WIN CHARITY GRID GAME

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—My illusions die hard, but I am beginning to suspect that the heavyweight prize fighters have no other interest in the game than a selfish desire to make money. There are several matches available among the more prominent boys, such as Sharkey, Schmeling, Stribling, Carnera and Griffiths, and it seems to me that if these persons, who pretend to be sportsmen, were really animated by sporting motives, they would all get into one and the same ring, in Paris, some evening, and run off a tournament as the amateurs do, to isolate an authentic heavyweight champion.

It is a serious thing to impugn a man's sportsmanship, I know, but this is a case for plain speaking, and any one with the interests of the game at heart must have noticed that the game has been degenerating into a money-making scheme not unlike intercollegiate football.

It may be that the boys and their respective managers have been so close to the situation themselves that they have not been able to see themselves as they appear to others and thus do not realize that they are making a very bad impression. But frankly I am not inclined to make excuses for any of them as avarice seems to have claimed them all.

AMATEURS ARE BEST SPORTS

Among pleasure-fighters the sportsmanship is of a much better quality. If one gentleman, for some reason or even for no reason whatever, suggests that he can lick another gentleman, the match is as good as made, and after a brief time devoted to such remarks as, "You are a liar!" and "I am, am I?" the fight is on. But among the professional heavyweights, who have a responsibility to exemplify the best sportsmanship in the game and every reason to resent reflections on their ability, the process of producing a fight is very gradual and in some cases interminable.

Each of the five most prominent boys frankly insist that he can lick the other four, but very little fighting takes place, and when the excuse is offered that they are waiting for the public demand I do not believe them. On the contrary, they are only waiting until the public decides to meet their prices, which are very high, and, to mince no words, the whole situation smacks of commercialism.

It is not to embarrass or annoy the boys that I point these matters out, but to save the game from the viper which is hovering over the escutcheon of a clean, chivalrous sport and gradually undermining the foundations. The boys are still sportsmen at heart, I am confident, and if they could be brought to see the effect of their conduct they could be relied upon to do the right thing. But if they do not do so, then one of these days it will become necessary to abolish the gate receipts entirely in order to redeem boxing and restore its original purpose.

I make this suggestion realizing that prize fighting really pays the way for a number of other activities which are not self-supporting, such as sitting down, standing around the cigar store and arguing as to whether John L. Sullivan fought better than William T. Tilden 2d would play shuffleboard if he played shuffleboard as well as he plays tennis. But these sports, while desirable, playing an admittedly important part in the development of clean, healthy manhood, need not be followed as vocations, and it is not at all necessary that men should devote all of their time to them. In a well-proportioned routine, sitting down, hanging around the cigar store and arguing the one about Sullivan and Tilden should be a spare-time diversion, and the participants should engage in useful toil.

FIGHTS PAY FOR OTHER THINGS

The present winter would be an excellent time for the boys to manifest an understanding of the principles of sport and woo the confi-

Try-For-Point Rule Change Proposed

Suggest Second Try to Lessen Effect on Result.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—The Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Football Officials today, in effect, approved the point after touchdown, but suggested that the penalties for fouls occurring while the try for point is made now are "too drastic."

The association pointed out that under the present rules such fouls are penalized by the awarding or disallowing the point which often proves the deciding factor of the game. Instead of awarding or disallowing the point, the association would have such fouls penalized just as they are when they occur in ordinary scrimmage.

Holding its annual meeting in the Hotel McAlpin, the association also took up the much-discussed fumble rule and went on record as favoring a uniform interpretation of that regulation so that on all kicks as well as fumbles "the ball, if recovered before it strikes the ground, may be advanced by the recovering side."

Touchdown by Yale on Fumble Recalled.

This action recalled the famous touchdown which Barres, Yale end, made against Georgia this year, when he grabbed a kicked ball as it bounded out of the arms of a Georgia player and ran to a touchdown. The legality of the score afterwards was questioned.

Regarding the extra point, the association had this to say:

"It is the feeling of the football officials that on the try for point after touchdown, the penalties for fouls which occur are now too drastic. They believe that rules should be enforced in this case just as they would be if the fouls occurred in any ordinary scrimmage.

"Instead of awarding or disallowing the point, which often times is the deciding factor in the game, the officials think a penalty as specified in the rules for that particular offense should be inflicted. For example: A team making the try has three options; namely, to kick the ball, carry it across by rushing, or complete a forward pass in the opponents' end zone.

"If on the try a player of team B (defensive team) is offside and the try fails, the ball would be played on the 1-yard line. This would be a real penalty for that infraction of the rule because the chances of a successful try by rushing would be materially improved with the ball on the 1-yard line.

"On the other hand, if the foul is committed by the offense, and the ball placed on the 7-yard line or farther back, depending upon the penalty, two of the attacking team's three options would be practically eliminated. The distance to the goal line would be too great to chance a running play, and the defense, taking advantage of this fact, could guard more easily against a forward pass.

Butler Proposals Before Sports Convention Today

New York, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Football in particular and amateur sport in general is due for its annual overhauling this week when three important sport bodies meet for their annual conventions.

The now famous suggestions of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia, for taking the overemphasis out of football are due to come up at least twice in the course of the many discussions. The American Football Coaches Association and the Sportsmanship Brotherhood are due to consider that subject officially.

YES, the three propellers which carried the Southern Cross with its crew over the Atlantic and around the world are actually made of cotton. The propellers were made of layers of ordinary canvas treated with certain chemicals and compressed into a substance possessing the strength of steel. Many seaplanes have used these propellers for, when tipped with brass, they have been found especially capable of resisting water spray.

East-West Game Nets Hospital $50,000; Rose Bowl Grid Foes Are Given Day of Rest

West's Victory Fourth of Six Games With East Teams.

By RUSSELL J. NEWYAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Football's final upset of the 1930 season had been written into the records today; a crop of more than $50,000 had been harvested for charity, and the sixth annual East-West game had gone down into history as the hardest fought contest in this classic, which was established in 1925.

One accurate place-kick from the toe of Bus Mills, Oklahoma half back, brought the West a 3-to-0 victory over the East after the two all-star squads had battled up and down Kezar Stadium field for nearly four periods without a score.

Kitzmiller Is Hero for West.

The Eastern squad, coached by Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, went into the game a decided favorite, holding 8 pounds weight advantage per man. Twice in the first half, the East missed touchdowns by a narrow margin. Milton Santenbein, Wisconsin end, was on the receiving side of the pass that netted a 46-yard gain, but 10 yards from the West's goal he was caught by Bill Clark, Stanford half back. Frank Baker, Northwestern end, tossed away the second chance to score when he fumbled a pass after snagging it almost on the goal line. In the third period Len Macaluso, full back from Colgate, and the outstanding back for the East, tried to place-kick from the 23-yard line, but the ball went wide of its mark.

While Mills received full credit for the victory, all agreed the spark plug of the West's offense was Johnny Kitzmiller, Oregon half back, who came into the game in the second period. Kitzmiller's appearance revived the spirits of a battered Western squad and he reeled off long gains, putting the East on the defensive.

He was the leading ground gainer of the day and directed his team's strategy. Dana X. Bible, of Nebraska, and Percy Locey, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, cocoaches of the Western Team, were lavish in their praise of Kitzmiller. Dana saying he was one of the most finished players he had seen perform.

The contest was sponsored by the Shriners Crippled Children's Hospital. In six games to date Western teams have four times emerged victorious. Eastern elevens won in 1928 and 1929. Four members of the Western team, Noble Atkins, center, of Texas Christian; Jake Wilson, quarter back, and Barton Koch, guard, both of Baylor, and Louie Long, end, of Southern Methodist, left today for Dallas, where they will play in another charity game New Year's Day. Members of the Eastern squad will leave tonight for Pasadena, to take in the New Year's Day tournament of Roses contest.

Notre Dame Netters Also Ramble a Bit

South Bend., Ind., Dec. 28 (A.P.). George Keogan's Notre Dame Basket Ball Team also is something of a rambling outfit.

While the travels of the netters are not so extensive as those of the football players, they include jaunts to West Point, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Milwaukee, Iowa City, Indianapolis and Lafayette, Ind.

Marseilles, France, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Arthur Veil Picard's St. Bernard won the Massiglia Stakes, a steeplechase handicap of 2 miles 6½ furlongs, today, with La Biche second and Marshal French third. St. Bernard, trained by the American, Wally Davis, was an odds-on choice at 1 to 3. Five started.

Charity Grid Game In Baltimore January 1

Baltimore's first charity football game will be played New Year's Day at the Baltimore Stadium between Trenton Athletic Club and the Cross Country Club.

The Trentons are considered the leading amateur independent grid team of Baltimore, while the Cross Country Club, nationally known for its track and field teams, had a grid team coached by Okey O'Connor, former St. John's College star.

The game is backed by the police and fire departments, the United Railways and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Washington Staters, Alabama on Sight-seeing Tours.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 28 (A.P.). Football players of Alabama and Washington State, opponents in the sixteenth annual intersectional New Year's Day clash, thrust the cares of the gridiron behind them today and took sight-seeing tours through southern California. Both teams expected to take in points of interest along the Pacific Ocean front, including Los Angeles Harbor and the naval fleet at anchor.

Monday practice will be taken up in earnest again with the Cougars from the Northwest, facing probably the hardest workout. Coach Orin "Babe" Hollingberry expects to put his gridsters through a hard session both Monday and Tuesday, allowing them to taper down on Wednesday.

Coach Wallace Wade has entirely different ideas for the Crimson Tide. He gave his squad its last strenuous drill Saturday. From now on it will be a matter of polishing off in an effort to round the team into a proper physical and mental condition for the struggle.

Unless injury befalls some one before the coming clash, both teams expect to send their strongest array into the Rose Tournament game.

Ticket sales have picked up sharply following Christmas but a capacity crowd of 85,000 is hardly likely. Present indications are that 65,000 will witness the struggle which marks Alabama's third appearance in the annual intersectional classic and Washington State's second.

Neither team has been defeated in a Tournament of Roses game, although Alabama was tied by Stanford in its second appearance.

Hadley, of Nats, Among Leaders Of League as Strikeout Hurler

ELEVEN strike-outs seemed to be the limit of American League pitchers during the 1930 campaign and only three of them succeeded in fanning as many as that in a single game. Henry Johnson was the only right-hander to push the ball past eleven batters while Grove and Whitehill were the southpaws to turn the trick. Peculiarly, Johnson lost his game in which he turned back eleven of the Washington team.

Johnson also struck out ten of the Red Sox in another game while George Earnshaw breezed ten of the Tigers early in the season, the day after Bob Grove had fanned nine of them. Grove, Ruffing and Hadley each pitched three games in which they struck out nine. Earnshaw had two such exhibitions while Crowder, Uhle, Morris, Braxton and McKain each had one.

Grove pitched four games in each of which he struck out eight. So did his teammate, Big George. Uhle and Pipgras each had two while Ruffing, Collins, Hadley, Ferrell and Whitehill each had one.

Ferrell and Pipgras each had three games in which they fanned seven. Hadley, Uhle, Sorrell and Earnshaw each two and Sherid, Walberg, Stewart, Collins, MacFayden, Welland, Blaeholder, Caraway, Hogsett, Fischer, Liska, Gaston, Marberry and Whitehill each one.

Sam Gray failed to strike out more than five in any one game, which was the limit for Ted Lyons and Al Thomas. Six was the most that Harder, Lisenbee, Hudlin or Sam Jones could breeze.

Georgetown's Track Year Opens

Six Runners in K. C. Meet at Brooklyn Saturday.

WEEK'S COURT CARD.
TOMORROW NIGHT.
Georgetown vs. Manhattan College at New York City.
TUESDAY NIGHT.
Georgetown vs. St. John's at Brooklyn.
SATURDAY NIGHT.
Gallaudet vs. Strayer's at Gallaudet.

THE annual lull, or respite, of local college athletes continues this week, and the worst the schedule members could do to break the boys' rest was to arrange three games. Georgetown is to appear in two contests, while Gallaudet will meet Strayer's Business College in the third.

Georgetown's traveling basketers remain in the metropolitan area, where they played two games last week, to engage in two more clashes before returning to the Capital. Tonight in New York City Coach Johnny Colrick's players are slated to face Manhattan College on the Jaspers' court. Tomorrow night the Hoyas will oppose the crack St. John's team in Brooklyn.

The coming six days also bring into action the Georgetown track team, or part of it. Six of Coach John D. O'Reilly's runners will show their wares in the annual Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus, games, scheduled Saturday night in Brooklyn.

G. U., Following Two Losses, Promises Rattle.

Having absorbed a couple of beatings at the hands of the Brooklyn Caseys and the Crescents last week, Georgetown's tossers should go out with blood in their eyes tomorrow when they tackle Manhattan College. The Hoya record now shows two victories and as many defeats.

Manhattan is not rated quite as highly as the Caseys and Crescents, but the Jasper team probably will give Georgetown a warm night. Catholic University fell before the Manhattan attack last week by 28 to 27.

Georgetown tomorrow night will engage what is popularly regarded as the best college basket ball team east of the Mississippi River when it stacks up against the Redmen of St. John's. The Brooklyn shotmakers lost only one game during a strenuous 24-game campaign in 1929-1930.

It would be a bright feather in the Hilltop cap to tumble the mighty Redmen.

Gallaudet will put in several days of hard practice to prepare for Strayer's Saturday night, for the Kendall Green outfit is anxious to pull its winning record up to the .500 mark. At present Gallaudet has only one victory to show against two defeats. There is no basis on which to draw a comparison of Gallaudet and Strayer's, but it is generally thought that the Kendall Green five is the superior.

Coach O'Reilly Not to Accompany Track Team.

Coach O'Reilly will not accompany his Georgetown trackmen to the Brooklyn indoor meet. He has nominated Capt. Vic Burke, Artie Briggs, John Downing, Paul Connolly, Jack Mara and Jimmy St. Lawrence to compete. Burke, Briggs and Connolly will run in a special 500-yard race, while the rest will answer the sarter's gun in a 1,000-yard run.

Maryland University, the lone member of the Capital group of colleges yet to make an appearance on the court, will inaugurate practice tomorrow in the College Park gymnasium. About nine players will report to Coach Burton Shipley. Maryand's initial game is scheduled with Gallaudet on January 7.

The Washington Collegiate Conference series will be resumed on January 6, when Columbus University meets Strayer's at Central High School.

George Washington, unbeaten thus far, will swing back into action against Navy at Annapolis on January 7, while Catholic, winner of one of its four games to date, will resume competition against Benjamin Franklin at Brookland on January 8.

American University's five will meet Gallaudet in its next game at home on January 9. The A. U. quintet has played only one game, and in that conquered Maryland State Normal by a score of 37 to 19.

Boys Club Celebrates With Cage, Ring Bouts

The Boys Club will celebrate its tenth anniversary this week with a special basket ball game and boxing bouts.

On New Year's Day, the best of the Boys Club basketers will combine and play a team of former Boys Club players, all of whom are now in college and participating in basket ball.

The Boys Club boxers will mix matters on Friday, Coach Matt Twomey has arranged an attractive card, featuring battlers from within the club.

Whalen's Runs Feature As Meridians Win, 12-0

Mark Whalen was the whole show when his team, the Meridians, defeated the Skinker Bros. Eagle eleven, 12 to 0, yesterday afternoon on Friendship Field. Early in the third period Whalen caught a 10-yard pass from Bush and ran 36 yards for a touchdown, and midway in the last quarter he returned a Skinker punt 41 yards for a second 6-pointer.

The Meridians would like to play either Palace-District Grocery Stores or the Government Printing Office Pedals next Sunday. Manager Joe Reudi can be reached at Columbia 5723 between 5 and 6 o'clock.

Fox on Leesburg Street Eludes Hounds in Chase

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 28.—Eluding his pursuers by seeking refuge in town, a large red fox running fast made his way through the main street of Leesburg yesterday after being chased by the hounds for more than one and one-half hours, while the yelping pack and the foam-flecked steeds looked in vain for Reynard on the outskirts of the town. Lost to the hounds the fox escaped and it was only after the hunt was over that the riders were told the quarry had been seen running down Main street.

The meet was held by the Loudoun Hunt Club from Virts' corner. Forty riders were in the field at the beginning and a number witnessed the start of the hunt. Shortly after starting, the fox was jumped on the farm of Clifton Coates near Woodburn, and gave the riders one of the most thrilling chases of the season. The pace was furious and the field became thinner and thinner as the riders, feeling the strain, reined in their horses and left the race to the hardier.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—Washington's indoor net team conquered the Mount Washington racqueters, of Baltimore, here today in the District aggregation's third match of the Winter Indoor League. The score was five matches to one, the Baltimorean's lone win coming when Eric Jacobsen defeated Bob Considine.

The three doubles matches scheduled were not completed, and will be played later in the season.

The feature match of the day—and one of the longest matches ever played at the Fifth Regiment Armory—was the one in which Dooly Mitchell, sterling District netman, defeated the veteran Elmer Rudy by the score 15—13, 4—6, 14—12.

Considine, D. C. Champ, Easy Victim.

It was nip and tuck all the way, the advantage shifting from one player to the other with exciting fickleness. Rudy looked like the winner when he reached match point at 8—9 and 40—30 in the third set, but Mitchell met the challenge with a sturdy forehand drive or two, drew level, and was the stronger man at the end. Mitchell's serving was, perhaps, the deciding point of the marathon.

Colin Stam molded out a nice victory over Crane Smoot, former champion of Maryland. The District net star had to come from behind to defeat the steady driving former champion.

SINGLES.

Mitchell (W.) defeated Rudy, 15—13, 4—6, 14—12; Jacobsen (Mt. W.) defeated Considine, 6—0, 6—1; Buchanan (W.) defeated Andrews, 6—4, 6—3; Eddi Yeomans (W.) defeated Roberts, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2; Stam (W.) defeated Smoot, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4; Clyde Yeomans (W.) defeated Buechelt, 6—3, 6—4.

DOUBLES.

Considine-Clyde Yeomans vs. Roberts-Andrews, 11—9, 4—6 (postponed); Stam-Eddie Yeomans vs. Gripenkerl-Andrews, 6—6, 3—3 (postponed).

Colbert's Goals Let B. C. Standards Win

Special to The Washington Post.

Fort Humphreys, Va., Dec. 28.—"Bits" Colbert, of the Boys Club Standards, negotiated two pretty field goals in the last two minutes of play to enable his team to eke out a 36-to-34 victory over the Fort Humphreys Quintet in a well-contested game staged here this afternoon on the Soldiers' floor. The battle was nip and tuck throughout.

McBride, of Fort Humphreys, and Lassise, of the Standards, waged a close battle for high scoring honors, with the former winning out by 1 point.

Sweeney Eagles' Ace As Detroit Five Bows

A field goal by Joe Sweeney in the last minute of play enabled the Skinker Bros. Eagle Basket Ball Team to nose out the Detroit Clowns yesterday afternoon on the Silver Spring floor by a 30-to-28 score. About 400 witnessed the contest.

The Eagles were forced to come from behind to win, as the Detroiters were in the van at the half, 18 to 14. Ralph Bennis carried off high-scoring honors with five field goals and one foul shot. The Martin brothers starred for the visitors.

The Eagles will be in for the sternest sort of opposition next Sunday when they encounter the Olsen Swedes from Newmanaville, Mo., champion road basket ball team of the country. The battle will be staged in the Silver Spring Gym and will start at 3:30 o'clock.

New York Charity No Richer; Expenses Eat Up "Gate."

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (A.P.).—Charity that suffereth long took an extra measure of punishment today along with 1,500 stragglers and two half dozen squads of football players as a team of Southern collegians downed an eleven from the colleges of the North, 7 to 0 on an ice-and-snow-covered gridiron.

It was the last of nice contests arranged in the Metropolitan sector in the name of charity, but the tiny crowd that turned out and wandered haphazardly along the side lines for the most part failed to pay the expenses of bringing the two elevens together. The failure of the gate receipts also solved the problem of naming the charity for which the match was staged, a question that had not been decided up to game time.

Davidson Only Player Able to Keep on His Feet.

George Davidson, quarter back from the University of Georgia, was the only man in the park able to keep his feet consistently on a playing surface better suited for a hockey game. In one flair in the third quarter, the only sustained effort either team was able to make, Davidson passed and ran 80 yards in three successive plays, to bring about the only touchdown of the game.

He took the ball on South's 20-yard line after a Northern punt had rolled over the goal for a touchback and promptly passed to Holland, big end from Tulane, on North's 43-yard line for a gain of 37 yards. On the next play, Davidson slipped through right tackle and cut back 13 yards to the 25-yard line. He then passed to Jim Manger, North Carolina half back, and his Southern mate dove along the sidelines for the score. Davidson place-kicked the extra point.

For the rest of the struggle, the Southern backs, with Phillips, of Kentucky, at full back and Rothstein, of Georgia, at half, slithered and slid about on the ice, sanded as if it were a slippery sidewalk. The Northern ball carriers, Miller, of Penn State; Antes, of Boston College; Swede Hansen, of Temple, and "Bull" Karcis, of Carnegie Tech, did likewise, kicking and fumbling frequently, and never coming dangerously close to a score.

Miller, Hansen Bulk of North's Attack.

Miller and Hansen made the most of what little there was to the North's attack along with a little substitute, Margolies, of St. John's (Brooklyn).

Most of the spice was taken from the contest by the failure of Buddy Hackman, Tennessee star, and Red Bethea, of Florida, to remain in Brooklyn long enough to lug leather for the Southerners, coached by Stumpy Thomason, former Georgia Tech half back. They were reported in Dallas, Tex., for an all-star game there.

New Style Golf Ball Indorsed by Champs

Glenna Collett, national women's champion; Maureen Orcutt, second ranking player among women; William Reekie, former metropolitan champion; Tom Kerrigan, pro at the Siwanoy, New York club, and Johnny Plattery, assistant at Siwanoy, agreed in approving the ball, but said it would require more skill and less dependence by the golfer on his clubs.

The players also predicted the new ball would bring into play longer clubs, especially wood and No. 1 and 2 irons.

"Willie" Andrews, Sandlot Leader, Dies

William "Willie" Andrews, 60, prominent figure for fifteen years in Washington sandlot athletics, died yesterday in his home, 200 Fourth street northeast, after an illness of about three months.

As manager of the basket ball and baseball teams known as the National Circles, Andrews established himself as one of the leaders and a popular one among local sandlot enthusiasts. His baseball teams were uniformly strong and made their mark not only here but in other cities where they often were asked to perform.

Andrews, whose occupation was that of a pipe fitter at the Bureau of Standards, was born in New York State near the city of Elmira. He came to Washington with his family about 20 years ago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Catherine Andrews, and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Davis.

NEW ORLEANS RACING SCENE SHIFTS THURSDAY

Sun Beau Entered in $10,000 New Orleans Handicap.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 28.—Everything is in readiness for the opening of the 1931 winter racing session of the Louisiana Jockey Club at the Fair Grounds on next Thursday afternoon. As has been the custom for many years, the big opening feature is the New Year's Handicap.

With practically all of the turf stars in the Crescent City eligible to compete, the field promises to be one of the classiest in the history of New Orleans racing. Two of the turf's greatest horses—Sun Beau and Paul Bunyan—will be missing, however, being saved up by their owners for their engagement in the $10,000 New Orleans Handicap, which will be decided on the afternoon of Saturday, January 31.

Course Now One of Safest for Horses.

As a result of expenditures of close to $200,000 since the close of racing last season, the Fair Grounds, known as the "Belmont Park of the South" and the "Horsemen's Playground of America," becomes the most beautiful of all winter race tracks.

Improvement on the racing strip has made the course one of the safest for training and racing purposes. The new drainage system is pronounced perfect and it will be possible for fleet thoroughbreds to register fast time even after a hard rain.

Ten big stake events will be decided during the meeting. These features range in value from $3,000 to $10,000, the latter amount being offered for the New Orleans Handicap. The Louisiana Jockey Club is the only winter track which has not cut down purses. Secretary McLennan has been instructed to add overnight handicaps and allowance races with liberal purses throughout week days in order to give the best racers here an opportunity to engage in spirited contests.

Sun Beau Adds Prestige to $10,000 Stake.

Racing will be in charge of Martin Nathanson and George B. Brown, jr., who are recognized as two of the the most capable and fearless stewards in America. They are now on the ground and have passed on applications for licenses from jockeys and trainers. All undesirables have been turned down.

The fact that Sun Beau is to be a starter in the New Orleans Handicap gives that event great prestige and is sure to attract many visitors. Sun Beau will have some keen competition, however, from such turf stars as Golden Prince, Hillsborough, Boot to Boot, Poet, Thystle Fyrn, Dinah Did Unset, Fortunate Youth, Prince D'Amour, Dixie Lad, Galahad, Voltear, Paul Bunyan, War Instigator, Playtime, Royal Son, Battle Ax, Strongheart, Jimmy Moran, Cog-Air, Disturb, Flimsy, Skirl, Crazy Coot, Tantivy, Rueful, Bargello and many other good ones. Weights for the New Orleans Handicap will not be assigned until January 24.

—Jefferson Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

JEFFERSON PARK, which will close its first meeting on Wednesday, giving way to the meeting at the Fair Grounds beginning on New Year's Day, features the Rambler Purse, at a mile and 70 yards, this afternoon. Six horses are slated, the smallest field of the afternoon. The track is slow.

SCONE, which has won her last two starts, beating much the same kind of fields as this race, should make it three. She takes off weight, running today under 97 pounds and was drawing away from Bob Rogers and Taddywawa in her recent winning race. That was one of the fastest 6 furlongs of the meeting, run in 1:12, and there is no reason to believe that she will not go the greater distance. She made all the pace that day and won by a length and a half. WAR INSTIGATOR is regarded the contender. He shows some class occasionally and likes a route. THOMAS SETH, a recent winner, which has been running well all season, can hold the others safe.

FIRST RACE—The first race is for all-aged maidens. SKIBO appears to be well placed and should win on his last race, in which he ran Malaita to a head finish, with Ben Marshall third, where four horses finished heads apart. ATTIRE ran well last out, finishing third to Agnes Sorel and Flagg Porter, and should be the contender in this ordinary field. BULLY has been rated highly but has shown little, but may land the show money.

SECOND RACE—M'TINKLE is rated best in the second race. Recent races show he is gradually returning to form and he has little to beat here. THE MOON should be close up, for while he was unplaced in his last start, in his previous race he was second to The Abbot, and led most of the way, but quit as if short. He will have LADY PARTRIDGE to beat for place. This filly has shown good form and will hold the others safe.

THIRD RACE—HAM is selected to win the third race. The class of the horses improves in this event. FAIR ORB is better than recent races show and is regarded a dangerous contender. It is necessary to go back on HAM a few races, for in his last he was never a contender. In the previous race he was third to Shanflow and Herendeen. The track was good. He won his race previous to that, beating John T. D. five lengths, and in the race next to that also won. BLACK ALICE won recently, and she looks best of the others. She won easily over Huon Time and Mamette. The race is at a mile and a sixteenth.

FOURTH RACE—The fourth brings in a well balanced field of ten sprinters for the 6-furlong route. HIGH SCORE is picked. In his last start he beat Theo Rochester, and was the odds-on favorite, runing 6 furlongs in 1:13 2-5. He is at home on this track, which seems to make quite a difference in the winning ability of horses. EIL WEIR has a chance and is rated next best. BOB ROGERS should get in the money, as he has won two races during this meeting over fields almost as strong as this.

SIXTH RACE—BOSKY appears to be be a standout in the sixth race at a mile and a sixteenth. He was third to Eager Play Friday, but has run better races this winter than that. He was second on December 10 to Ultimate Vote, a fast race, which should win this by three or four lengths. MARY DALE won her last out, beating Fair Beth and others, which makes her the contender by a wide margin. AIMEE GOLDSMITH, on best form, would have a chance among these. She should save the short end of the purse.

SEVENTH RACE—VILLAGER looks easily best in the seventh. He finished second to Zahn last out, but was favorite at a close price. SATISFY has a chance to save place money, while BON FILS also looks like a money possibility on recent races, being third to Zahn and VILLAGER a few starts back. There is no class in this number, and, after VILLAGER, there seems no probable favorite.

FORMER HIGH STARS TO BE SEEN HERE

Alumni of McKinley, Central, Gonzaga Play Varsities.

SCHEDULE FOR WEEK.
TUESDAY.
Gonzaga vs. Alumni, at Gonzaga, 8 o'clock.
WEDNESDAY.
Tech vs. Alumni, at Tech, 11 o'clock.
Central vs. Alumni, at Central, 3 o'clock.
FRIDAY.
Central vs. Gonzaga, at the Boys' Club, 3 o'clock.

FORMER high school basket ball stars galore will be seen in action this week as three of the local schools—Tech, Central and Gonzaga—play host to teams composed of players who once wore the colors of these three institutions.

While it may not produce the best basket ball of the week, the game Tuesday night between Gonzaga and its alumni should be one of the interesting. A quarter of the fray will be played by a team composed of the four Farrell brothers. Other Gonzaga alumni expected to appear are Allie McGowan, Tom Brew, Turk Tobin, Joe MacGowan, Happy Enright, Dan Sullivan, Danny Fyne, Charley McVean, Joe Lynch, Ted Himmelberg and possibly Johnny Bozek.

Tech Meets Alumni Five Wednesday Morning.

Tech will make its third appearance of the year Wednesday morning when the Maroon and Gray's erstwhile performers will return to the Tech court. A tough game is expected by Coach Artie Boyd. He has been drilling his District champions each morning of the holidays, excepting Christmas, and this campaign will continue throughout the week.

Bill Werber, Jakie Goldblatt, "Bozey" Berger, George Lassise, Bob McCartee and others have been lined up by Coach Boyd as opposition for Tech's current team.

The annual New Year's Day game between present and past members of Central High should produce a good brand of basket ball. Coach Bert Coggins has a rich past from which he can pluck such stars as Mickey McDonald, Earle Moser, Forrest Burgess, Pete Nee and others too numerous to mention.

Central-Gonzaga Clash On Friday.

Central will be seen again on the floor the following day when Gonzaga is met at the Boys' Club. The Blue and White machine is the stronger quintet this year by far, Coach Mitchell, of Gonzaga, having lost most of his basket bulwarks by graduation. Central also has the edge in competition, having participated in nine games to date while Gonzaga has been seen in but two.

Iroquois-Alcovas In 0-0 Football Tie

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Dec. 28.—Iroquois and Alcova elevens battled through four scoreless periods at Dreadnaught Park here this afternoon in a contest which was to decide the northern Virginia 150-pound title. Miserable weather conditions handicapped both teams.

Neither team had any pronounced edge over the other. Kingman, of the Alcovas, provided the outstanding feature of the contest in the third quarter, when he took a short forward pass and ran 32 yards across the Iroquois goal line, only to be called back and to have his team penalized for being off-side on the play.

Preliminary arrangements have been made to have the two clubs meet at the same place next Sunday in an attempt to decide the 150-pound championship.

GONZAGA THREE-A'S WIN.

The Gonzaga Three-A quintet captured a 32-to-18 decision from U. S. Daily basketers in a contest staged yesterday afternoon in the Gonzaga Gym.

After holding the Gonzagans in check the first half, the losers weakened in the second to allow the Three-A's to roll up a big lead.

Gregg, with eight field goals, and Shaughnessy, with five, were high-point men for the winners. Wade looked best for U. S. Daily.

ROSEDAL'S soccer team took the lead in the Capital City Soccer League yesterday without even kicking a ball. Gaithersburg was scheduled to play the Northeast lads, but failed to put in appearance and Referee Ed Kruse so reported to the league officials. The game is not officially forfeited until acted upon by the league, but there is no question but that the match will go to Rosedale Rockville, former holder of the leading position, was idle yesterday.

Army continued on its winning streak by stapping Fashion Shop in a fast game, 2 to 0. The Soldiers sprang the big surprise of the season last week, when they defeated Gaithersburg, 4 to 1, and, if any of the soccer fans thought this victory was a flash in the pan, they were set right yesterday when the Fort Myer kickers put up a flashy game to down the Ninth street boys.

Rockville Trails by Love Point.

Rosedale now leads Rockville by one point, but the chances of the Maryland kickers overhauling the local prides are slim when it is considered that the league leaders have four more games to play in which, in all probability, they will pick up at least six points. Rosedale still has to play the last place Silver Spring Eleven, the faltering Gaithersburg squad and the inexperienced Fashion Shop Club. The only hard contest before it is the one with Rockville.

Evidences of the bitter struggle that has been fought throughout the year for the Capital City League title may be found in a perusal of the league standing. Gaithersburg, Fashion Shop and

SHARES ARE STEADY IN STOCK MARKET

DAILY VALUES ARE OFF

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

The change in market sentiment, indicated by a drop of 1.5 per cent in the all-industrials index in the closing session last week causes the movement of prices since December 16 to show a steady rather than rising trend.

The week's average at 92.8 showed a decline of but 0.2 per cent from the preceding week's average of 93.0, while the movement from December 19 to 26 shows the stock price level off by 3.3 per cent. The break during last week's closing session came as a bitter disappointment to those who felt that the price level was moving upward.

On December 19 the all-industrials index, at 94.9, stood nearly 6 per cent above the year's low reached on December 16. In last week's opening session weakness was predominant, and the level at the close was off by 2.6 per cent.

Confidence Shows Gain.

For the two sessions preceding the holiday, confidence seemed to be restored as prices steadied to close on Wednesday with a slight loss from the preceding week's close. Had this sentiment held over the holiday the opinion that there was a sound note in the upward move in stock prices would have been based on the definite resistance of the market during the midweek sessions.

The groups, in general, moved in line with the all-industrials index, with the agricultural equipment, machinery and stores groups alone breaking in the closing session through their previous year's lows.

Coppers and preferred stocks showed gains of 3.2 and 0.2 per cent, respectively, over the week, while the aviation market was conspicuously heavy, showing a net loss of 11 per cent last week. Radio and theaters dropped by 9 per cent; agricultural equipment, building supplies and stores by 8 per cent each and investment stocks by 7 per cent.

Stock Values Traded Decline.

Average daily value of tradings in all stocks on the New York Stock Exchange last week dropped by 41 per cent, to $85,100,000. Common industrial stocks took a similar fall of 40 per cent to $64,100,000.

Only agricultural equipment and coppers and mining showed increased tradings last week. The utilities group suffered the sharpest fall by $11,200,000 in the average daily values traded. Other groups conspicuous for lack of trading were steels, off by $9,500,000, chemicals, off by $6,100,000 and foods and sugars, off by $5,200,000 each.

Paris and Berlin Stocks Decline.

Stock prices in London resisted further decline last week from their preceding week's lows. The index of London stock prices rose by 0.9 per cent indicating steadiness following the preceding week's drop of 2 per cent.

Last week the situation appeared to be critical in Paris where stock prices dropped by 6.3 per cent, maintaining the sharp downward trend that began in the preceding week when the index was off by 6.6 per cent. In the past two weeks Paris stock prices have dropped by 19.5 per cent to the low level of 86.2.

Berlin stocks spasmodically show periods of increased resistance to lower price levels. The Berlin index was off by 2.7 per cent last week, in comparison with a drop of 4.2 per cent in the preceding week.

Graded Industrials Decline.

The recent advance in stock prices was broken early last week, when prices dropped, but they steadied and made slight gains preceding the holiday. The closing session saw the public in a less confident mood, and prices again moved off.

The graded industrial groups show little out-of-line movement, investment stocks closing the week with a net loss of 3.1 per cent; semiinvestment stocks, a loss of 3.5 per cent and speculative stocks, a loss of 3.6 per cent.

Semi-investment stocks closed the week at the week's low of 70.1, while investment and speculative stocks held at points less than one-half of 1 per cent above their week's lows on December 22 and 24, respectively.

PALLIATIVES ASSIST UNEMPLOYED LITTLE

off, or giving partial employment to workers. An employer may maintain the rates, but he can not maintain the earnings of his employes. Buying power of workers is cut down as much or more than it would be by allowing wage rates to decline along with other prices. The sole merit of this practice, if it be a merit, is in keeping a high wage standard against the time of business revival.

The Public Works Idea.

The palliative of public works has certain merits, but its function has been greatly exaggerated, not to say misrepresented. Its applicability is very limited. Money or credit taken by taxation or by loans from the people for public works leave just that much less for private industry. I do not assert that public works are no good. It is possible to work out a program of public construction extending over 10 or 20 years although no such program has ever been planned anywhere. Such a program might be speeded up to tide over a severe emergency situation, but at best such work can be helpful for only a very short time. Private initiative and enterprise has in times past been less tardy and more effective than public efforts to aid recovery. However, hearty support should be given to the present public works program as an emergency measure.

The regularization plans of private corporations and plants deserve hearty commendation and their extension to other plants and industries should be encouraged. They are valuable, but they are as yet too limited in scope to help much toward the solution of the major problems of unemployment. No single employer, or group of employers in one industry, or even in several related industries, can effectively regularize production and employment in the one plant or the group of plants included under the plan. To be effective regularization must include all industries in the country and eventually in the world.

Encouraging beginnings have been made on a national scale in this country by employer associations similar to the Citrus Fruit Growers Association. International cooperation has been attempted by the several international cartels like the steel cartel, the copper syndicate and the proposed sugar agreement. The limitations and weaknesses of the existing employer agreements and associations, international as well as national, are too patent to require comment. Before any considerable progress can be made in this country toward extending and making effective an industrial regularization plan, the antitrust laws must be drastically reconstructed.

Regularization Is Right Track.

The limitations which apply to the individual plant and to groups of plants apply to cities and communities. All these plans by individual employers, by employer groups, by industries, and by communities to regularize production are all to the good. They show that public spirited employers and public officials are on the right track in tackling the chief cause of unemployment. These plans call for hearty commendation and support from all who desire to attack the causes of unemployment. I class these efforts at present among the palliatives because of their limited scope and extent.

Unemployment funds set up by individual employers and groups of employers to tide over periods of depressions are described in the report of the Industrial Relations Counselors of New York City. But these unemployment funds are quite inadequate to solve unemployment.

They are likely to go on the rocks during serious depression because the regularizing of employment is too big for a few individual employers or even groups of employers to accomplish. The plan deserves the heartiest commendation, however, as a first application on a limited scale of the insurance principle to the care, cure, and prevention of unemployment.

FARM PRODUCTS RISE

Wholesale commodity prices dropped by 0.5 per cent last week, holding the rate of decline steady for a period of two weeks. The index last week was 79.0, compared with 79.4 the preceding week.

The purchasing power of the wholesale dollar now stands at 126.6 or a value of 26.6 cents above the 1926 average.

Wholesale commodity prices in France and Germany steadied last week to make slight gains. The index of the French market rose by 0.53 per cent to 76.5. It was the first indication of any strength in this market for seven weeks. During this period the price level of commodities dropped by 2.9 per cent, from 78.4 during the week ended November 1 to 76.1 during the week ended December 19.

The wholesale price level steadied in Germany, gaining by 0.45 per cent. It was the first rise in six weeks, in which period the price level took a 3 per cent drop, from 91.5 the week ended November 8 to 88.8 the week ended December 19.

The English market was less responsive to better sentiment. The level continued to drop last week, reaching another low, and showing a loss of 0.72 per cent from the preceding week's level.

Phone Clarendon2324-W-2.

Alarmed at the increasing number of serious fires in Fairfax County during the past two months the State fire marshal's office and the national board of fire underwriters have stationed agents in Fairfax. These men, who are highly trained in arson work, have been working in conjunction with the local authorities and the sheriff's office and are investigating all fires throughout the county. Fires in the future, as well as several suspicious fires that have occurred recently are being thoroughly investigated. The local authorities have promised to vigorously prosecute any person charged with arson.

J. H. Strickline, of Alexandria, has been arrested by Fairfax County Policeman Arthur W. Mills on a charge of impersonating an officer. According to the policeman, complaint was made to him by a Washington motorist alleging that Strickline was driving his car along Telegraph road in Fairfax County and stopping motorists, saying he was a State officer. It is stated that each car that was stopped was thoroughly searched for liquor, and then allowed to proceed. Strickline was taken before Justice of the Peace Mark Cockerill, at Fairfax, and released on $500 bond pending a preliminary hearing this week.

Cecil Chase, of Gum Springs, was slightly injured when the car in which he was a passenger was forced from the Washington-Richmond highway near Accotink. After February 1, a 10 per cent penalty will be added for all persons that are delinquent. The only change in the license requirements this year is for restaurant keepers. All licenses must be paid at the office of the commissioner of revenue at Fairfax, with the exception of merchants. Commissioner Kinchloe announces that he will visit merchants' stores in the county beginning January 12, to check up their accounts for the year and to issue the necessary licenses. During 1930 a total of 8,865 licenses were issued in Fairfax County, with a total tax of $11,855.92. This amount is somewhat smaller than was paid during the previous year.

Population of Prisons In Maryland Increases

The county prison population of Maryland has grown since 1929 by 87 inmates, according to the annual report of Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the Prison Welfare Board. The total number of prisoners confined in Maryland county jails in 1929 was 356, according to the report, while the total in 1930 had increased to 443.

Liquor charges accounted for more than one-fourth of the prison confinements, with a total of 129. A drop in the number of youthful offenders was noted. In some counties, the report declared, jail conditions are worse than in 1929, while in many others no improvement has been noted. Seven counties, including Montgomery and St. Georges, according to the report, have shown a willingness to improve conditions.

ALTERCATIONS BRING DEATH TO TWO MEN

SECOND VICTIM IS SHOT

Two colored men were killed yesterday during altercations. One was fatally stabbed by his cellmate at the Lorton Reformatory and another was fatally wounded by shots that followed a friendly wrestling bout.

Vance Williams, 45 years old, colored, an inmate at the reformatory, thrust a knife into Lloyd Baxter, 40 years old, according to police. The affray took place before several other convicts and came as a sequel to several arguments between the men. Williams was serving a term for an assault with intent to kill. Baxter was sentenced for nonsupport.

James Walker, 24 years old, was killed during a quarrel yesterday noon in which Ludy Robinson, colored, 36 years old, of V street near Seventeenth street northwest, is alleged to have fired three shots into Walker, killing him almost instantly. The fighting occurred at Walker's home on S near Seventh street northwest.

Robinson was captured soon after by Headquarters Detective Carlton Talley, in a house on O street near Fourth street northwest. He surrendered without resistance.

Witnesses said that the shooting occurred after Robinson objected to have been being thrown heavily by Walker.

Postmaster's Job Sought by Editor

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 28.—Further interest was added to the race for the postmastership of Cumberland by the decision today of William W. Brown, president and managing editor of the Cumberland Daily News, to enter the fight. The position was made vacant by the recent death of E. Lee Shaw, who had filled it nearly four years.

About a dozen are aspiring for the place, and the time for filing applications with the secretary of the local board of civil service examiners expires December 31. It has been the rule to select the appointee from the three who make the best marks in the civil service examination. Postmaster Shaw, who was regarded as the Republican leader in the county, was named on recommendation of Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, whose home is in this city.

Mr. Brown served until a few months ago as the Republican, or minority, member on the State roads commission, having been appointed by Gov. Ritchie. The postmastership, which also includes the custodianship of the public building, pays about $5,000 a year.

OUTLAY OF $500,000 PLANNED BY U. OF V.

NURSES TO GET HOME

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 28.—Contracts totaling nearly $500,000 will be awarded soon by the visitors of the University of Virginia. Bids for the new wing to the Coobb chemical laboratory will be opened at the university at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, and those for the proposed law building a few weeks later, probably by February 1. These projects, together with the new home for nurses and the athletic stadium, now in course of erection, call for a total expenditure of over $1,000,000.

John B. Cobb, of New York, willed the university $140,000, of which $100,000 will go to increase the size of the building named after him, and $40,000 will be used in defraying the cost of the nurses' home.

The law building, which will cost $350,000, is a gift from William A. Clark, jr., of Los Angeles, Calif., an alumnus. Mural paintings in the new law school will cost an extra $50,000.

The law school will be erected on Dawsons row, just west of the McIntire Amphitheater. In 1859 six buildings, arranged in the arc of a circle, were erected about 200 yards southwest of West Range, to accommodate the increasing student body. Three of these buildings are being razed t make room for the new structure.

Work is about half completed on the new home for nurses, to cost $200,000. It is being erected in the space between the preventorium wing of the hospital, the Cobb chemical laboratory and the Frys Spring road.

Living quarters for 170 nurses, with a separate bedroom for each one, will be provided in the new building, which is being constructed in the form of a letter H. Three upper stories will contain bedrooms and recreation quarters, and below will be a basement for service quarters, class rooms and laboratories for instruction.

CENTENARIAN FINDS NEEDS EXAGGERATED

Baltimore Woman Says Lack of Aids Once Unknown Causes Fretting.

COMPARES WAR DAYS

Baltimore, Dec. 28 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—People are talking a lot about hard times, but most of them today don't know what hard times mean, says Mrs. Dorothy Louise Leutner, who will observe her one-hundredth birthday January 12.

Mrs. Leutner, who came to Baltimore in a sailing ship from Germany 98 years ago, contends that while there is real need today, most of those who talk most about bad times are not suffering, but making themselves unhappy because they are temporarily deprived of some luxury undreamed of when she was young

"Even the suffering in this country during the World War was nothing compared with that of the Civil War period," she said today.

Despite her acceptance of many modern developments as improvements, Mrs. Leutner is unchanging in her opposition to woman suffrage. Her three daughters vainly tried to induce her to cast her first ballot in the last election.

"Don't worry," has been her life motto.

(About a Week After Christmas.)

STENOGRAPHER (very tired) — Good morning.

Boss (who spent Christmas in a home full of children)—Just wind it to the left and then set it on the floor or any smooth surface. Don't wind it too tight. Might break the spring. The tractor works the same way, only the key is underneath. * * *

Stenographer (beginning to realize that he's collapsed under the Christmas strain)—Are you speaking to me, Mr. Jarvis?

Boss (sensing her presence vaguely)—What? Of course I'm speaking to you. You can't assemble it that way. You've got to follow the directions on the box. First you put the tracks together. That semaphore couldn't belong there. And you've got the tunnel in the wrong place. Put the trains where nobody will step on 'em until you get the thing ready to operate. That switch tower should go over there. * * *

Stenographer—But Mr. Jarvis * * *

Boss—Hark!

Stenographer—What?

Boss—Do I hear a snare drum?

Stenographer—I don't hear any, Mr. Jarvis.

Boss—I thought I distinctly heard a snare drum. Maybe I'm just imagining. Every boy on our street got a drum yesterday. You didn't get a drum for Christmas, did you?

Stenographer—Certainly not.

Boss—Nor a cornet?

Stenographer—No.

Boss (skeptically)—You wouldn't fool me, I hope. I really couldn't stand another blast on a cornet.

* * * *

THE stenographer (as the phone rings)—There's the telephone.

Boss (apprehensively)—Don't answer it.

Stenographer—Don't you want to answer any telephone calls today?

Boss—No. Take no chances. Might be my little nephew who wants assistance erecting one of those toy structural steel sets. I spent all Christmas Day trying to make him understand, but he didn't seem to grasp it.

Stenographer—And you're limping!

Boss—Am I? Oh, yes. So I am. Little Clarence, aged 5, got an archery outfit from his mother. One of the arrows punctured the calf of my left leg just before dinner.

SECRETARY (realizing the boss is too battered up mentally and physically to get down to business)—Don't you think you ought to rest, Mr. Jarvis.

Stenographer—He phoned he would not be in. He fell off a chair and broke a leg while helping to trim the Christmas tree.

Boss—Good!

Stenographer (surprised)—Good?

Boss—Yes, I was afraid I was the only member of this organization who'd found Christmas a terrible ordeal. Ha! Ha! Ha! Tee! Hee! Take a run around and bring me a report on the condition of other members of the firm. Ha! Ha! Ha!

(He becomes quite incoherent. The stenographer in alarm calls in a company associate. The company associate is a father, too. He realizes what's the trouble, rushes out and returns with a mechanical fire engine, which he unwraps and hands to the boss. The boss smiles, winds it up, sits down on the floor and plays with it calmly. He is quite content now.)

BOYS WILL BE BOYS.

HIS chin was badly bruised and there were black and blue marks on the side of his face. "What happened to you?" a friend demanded.

"I was on a little party," he explained, "and I bet a big husky feller there that he couldn't lift me."

"Well, did he?" asked the friend.

"Yeah," he replied sadly, "but he dropped me!"

Well, 1931 will prove a pretty good year even if it does nothing but kill the backgammon craze.

A Connecticut man, after partaking not wisely but too well of holiday liquor, went into a police station and confessed to a double shooting, about which, as it was later shown, he knew nothing except what he had read in the newspapers. One more drink of the stuff and he might have admitted the sinking of the naval collier Cyclops and the slaying of the Swiss Guard.

Money is getting cheaper all the time, the bankers say. Maybe that's why so many people don't want to be seen with any of it.

A Christmas tree was stolen from a Hollywood police station the other night. This tops the hitherto most contemptible yuletide thief—the fellow who broke into a home and stole father's Santa Claus suit and beard.

COUNTY ALLOCATION FOR ROAD IS FIXED

Four of Eight Miles of New Highway Allotted to Arlington.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICES

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 300. Clarendon, Va.

Allocation of one-half of the 8 miles of new State highway for Arlington County, under provisions of an act of the last General Assembly, is contained in an announcement from the office of the State Highway Commission at Richmond.

The announced distribution contains allotments which will complete the straight-to-the-bridge road, otherwise known as the John Marshall highway. The statement also shows the section that will be taken over for maintenance, Wednesday, and that to be taken over on July 1, 1931.

The section of the straight-to-the-bridge road to be taken over immediately comprises 1.60 miles and is designated as "south of Falls Church to the Fairfax County line." The remainder of the straight-to-the-bridge road to be taken over on July 1 comprises .70 of a mile, being designated "intersection of State route 711 to Porter Woods." This is the link connecting Clarendon with the Lee boulevard in Porter Woods.

Another road in the present distribution is that described as "Route 31, to the Glebe road, running along Four Mile Run." Route 31 is the Washington-Alexandria turnpike. Four-tenths of a mile is to be taken over immediately, and the remainder, 1.20 miles, will be taken over on July 1. Allotment of 0.10 of a mile on what is presumably Columbia pike also is to be taken over on July 1. This allocation is designated as, "Beginning at Washington-Alexandria turnpike, and going west toward the Arlington-Fairfax County line."

The allocations aggregate 4 miles of State highway. The remaining 4 miles will be distributed by the State Highway Commission in December, 1931, half of which will be taken over for maintainance at that time, and the remaining half, July 1, 1932.

Commenting on the allocations, Arthur Orr, president of the Straight-to-the-Bridge-Boulevard Association, expressed gratification that efforts of his organization for four years had been crowned with success. Future efforts, he said, will be devoted to completion of the John Marshall highway, of which the Straight-to-the-Bridge road is the first link. This highway will extend to the northern entrance of the Shenandoah National Park, at Front Royal, passing the home of the Chief Justice, near Marshall, Va.

The question of providing insurance for county firemen will be considered by the county board of supervisors tomorrow morning, at the courthouse at 10 o'clock.

This being the final meeting of the board for 1930 many matters doubtless will come up for consideration.

It was learned from County Engineer C. L. Kinnier that it is doubtful whether the board can take final action then on plans for the proposed concrete bridge on Mount Vernon avenue at the division line between the county and the city of Alexandria. Kinnier said that he has not heard from the officials of the city of Alexandria, and inasmuch as the expense of the bridge is to be born equally between the city and county, nothing can be done by the county until approved by the Alexandria officials.

The directors of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department will hold open house and give a smoker at the new fire house tonight. The supervisors and other county officials have been invited to inspect the department's new home.

Louis C. Carl, one of the directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the committee on entertainment for the annual meeting to be held in the dd Fellows Hall at Clarendon, announces Harold M. Brown, of Cherydale, will assist him in preparing the program.

The Clarendon Baptist Church will elect church officers Wednesday night in the church. At 10 o'clock a watch-night service will start. An illustrated lecture on the Holy Land and the life of Christ will be given by Joseph Jeffers. The public is invited to the service.

Under the direction of Capt. J. L. Beales, of the Jefferson District Fire Department, a dance will be given Wednesday night in the auditorium of the Firemen's Hall.

Ballston Council, No. 221, Junior Order United American Mechanics, will elect officers at a meeting in the fire house Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

The Ballston Christian Church will hold its annual meeting for the election of church and Sunday school officers Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

The Central Methodist Episcopal Church at Ballston will hold watch-night services, beginning at 8 o'clock Wednesday. The services will be under he auspices of the Epworth League.

Ballston Council, No. 36, Order of Fraternal Americans, will elect officers Wednesday night.

The Tax Board of Equalization will hold a public hearing in the rooms of the county board of supervisors at the courthouse this morning at 10 o'clock. The board completes its work Wednesday, so public hearings will be held tomorrow and Wednesday morning also at the same hour and place.

POLICE WILL MEET CAVALRY ON RANGE

FIRE ROUND WEDNESDAY

The Metropolitan Police Department will be well represented in a pistol match with cavalry officers from Fort Myer, Wednesday at 1 o'clock on the Georgetown University pistol range.

The Seventh Precinct team of the Washington Pistol Club, consisting of Lieut. Kelly, Privates Ditto, Ostrum, McCormick and LaForce, issued a challenge to several other teams and one of the first to accept was the team of picked shots from the regular cavalry at Fort Myer.

Maj. Murray, Lieuts. Knudson, Rehm, Greenhalgh and one other officer, not yet named, will complete the cavalry team. Lieut. H. J. Hunt, executive officer of the Washington Pistol Club, will have charge of the match and will score for both teams.

An interesting feature of this match will be that two members of the cavalry team, Lieuts. Rehm and Knudson, were former instructors at the last police school. Lieut. Rhem has been elected captain of the cavalry team of Camp Perry for 1931.

Overtime Work Started by Chest

Organization Attempts to Create as Many Jobs as Possible.

In order to spread employment and create as many jobs as possible, the Community Chest has been using a night shift in addition to its regular force in the tremendous tasks of preparing prospect cards for the 100,-000 people who are to be solicited directly in the coming campaign, Elwood Street, director of the chest, announced yesterday. This step was taken in preference to working the regular staff overtime and exhausting them, Mr. Street pointed out, and it is also a measure of economy as there are no overtime charges.

The double shift program was inaugurated by direction of the Community Chest office management committee, which supervises the economical operation of the chest office, Mr. Street said.

The committee consists of Clarence A. Aspinwall, chairman; J. B. Wyckoff, George O. Vass, Arthur J. Linn, Arch L. Peterson, M. H. Rittenhouse and George W. Hutchison.

MARTINSBURG PLANS FOR WATER SYSTEM

Banks and Industries Join With City to Provide for Emergencies.

WILL OVERHAUL PIPES

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 28.—Banking and industrial interests of the city administration joined hands yesterday in a program for immediate and comprehensive overhauling of the water system here in the belief that the work would assure an ample supply for all emergencies in the future and would immediately relieve the acute shortage here, which during the dry period left some homes on high grounds with virtually no water and aggravated the fire danger.

A general committee composed of representatives of the factories and banks was assembled and named a subcommittee, composed of Mayor C. H. Dailey, Thomas W. Martin and George W. F. Mullis, to formulate a program. This was submitted yesterday and, it was indicated, will be accepted.

It provides immediate correction of wastage of flow from source to water works by repair of pipes, at an estimated cost of $20,000, which the industries will finance upon promise of repayment out of a bond issue also proposed; a comprehensive survey by local and outside expert engineers, under the direction of the business and industrial committee, this report to be made January 10; retirement of all old notes against the water system, now amounting to $23,450, funds for the retirement to be made available through a bond issue, which would also take care of the $20,000 for pipe renewals and any other recommended work.

The report recommendes that a special enabling act be introduced at the January session of the Legislature to permit the program to be carried out. The report pointed out that the program involved no direct tax upon property for the work.

H. H. Emmert, attorney, was named chairman of the general committee proposing the work; Edward Rutledge, secretary, and George W. F. Mullis was proposed as a special treasurer for handling the funds involved in the move in the case it is undertaken.

Birthplace Plans Honors to Wilson

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Dec. 28.—This little city, in which he was born 74 years ago today, will pay honor to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth President of the United States, tomorrow evening. Wilson's War Secretary, Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C., will be speaker at a banquet at Staunton Military Academy.

Son of the Rev. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, the man who was to become America's war President and an international figure, was born while his father was serving the First Presbyterian Church here. His mother was Janet Woodrow Wilson, daughter also of a Presbyterian clergyman.
